Well, nuts

THE SIXTH International AIDS Conference opens tomorrow, and San Francisco seems to be going nuts.

The cops have installed a huge new chain-link fence near Moscone, to keep the demonstrators (who police say might become "violent") away from the conference participants, most of whom have probably seen demonstrations before and many of whom probably welcome the protests and agree with the protesters. And then there's the Great Marriott Nut Case.

It's a classic San Francisco story, the sort of thing that would only become an issue in a city whose collective nervous system is about ready to snap.

An employee at the Marriott Hotel, one site of the AIDS conference, called us early today with what seemed to be a strange tale: Marriott management, he said, had pulled all the mixed nuts off the tables in the 39th floor View Lounge. The managers were worried, he said, that some patrons might think the communal nuts could transmit AIDS.

Well, nuts. That makes no medical sense, and if it were true, it would make Marriott look pretty silly. So we sent a reporter, Ralph Jennings, down to the hotel to check things out.

Jennings rode up to the 39th floor, stopped by the lounge and discovered that there were, in fact, bowls of nuts on every occupied table. Michael Morgan, the hotel's director of beverages, told him there had been no policy change.

So I tracked down some Marriott waiters. "They've put them [the nuts] back," one waiter said. "They pulled them this weekend, but they put them back after ACT-UP called to complain."

So I called the ACT-UP people, but they didn't know any more than I did. By the time I tracked down Marriott's marketing director, Mark Lauer, the story was all over town. "I've been getting media calls about this all day," he said. "It's crazy." (Well, nuts.)

According to Lauer's version of the events, the nut bowls did, indeed, vanish from the tables this weekend. The hotel, he told me, just ran out of nuts. "I know that's hard to believe at a place this big," he said. "But we were switching to a new type of nuts, and over the weekend, we just didn't have any on hand."

As our cover story this week explains, there are some real, serious issues to be debated inside and outside the conference. But at this point, it looks to be a long, strange week.

Who's taking on the censors?

IF YOU thought the days of government censorship ended 20 years ago, that the battles over Howl, Tropic of Cancer and Naked Lunch were ancient history, it's time to think again. Consider some of the events of the past few months:

■ In San Francisco, police and FBI agents raid the home of photographer Jock Sturges and seize film and photographic material, saying his pictures of nude children are "pornographic."

■ In Broward County, Florida, sheriff's deputies arrest members of the rap band 2 Live Crew after a show, charging that the lyrics to the songs they performed were "obscene."

■ In Empire, California, school officials remove copies of Little Red Riding Hood from the library and classroom shelves, saying that the book promotes alcohol use because it describes a girl bringing her grandmother a bottle of wine.

Those are not isolated incidents. They're part of a consistent pattern of censorship that's spreading across the country like wildfire. And as the stories in our special censorship package beginning on page 19 demonstrate, the incidents are evidence that the fundamentalist right is gaining ground in its crusade to take control of America's culture.

The champions of that crusade, like Jesse Helms, Tipper Gore and Dana Rohrabacher, get lots of press, and unfortunately, lots of credibility. They've become household names.

And who is standing up for the other side? What nationally prominent politicians and public figures are out there every day, denouncing the crackdown on free speech and artistic freedom and leading the Good Fight for the opening of the American mind? Well... We're still wondering, too.

If there were ever a time for supporters of the First Amendment to organize and fight back, it's now. The United States is facing what may well be the most serious threat to civil liberties since the days of Joe McCarthy and the House UnAmerican Activities Committee. (It may actually be worse: Even during HUAC's reign of terror, nobody came close to amending the Bill of Rights). Unless we make ourselves heard, we could end up living in a society that severely restricts, directly or indirectly, everything we can hear, see, read and do.

A few members of Congress have spoken out against repressive measures like restrictions on NEA grants and the flag-burning amendment. Most of our local representatives will vote against those bills.

But that's not enough. At a time when the news media is giving tremendous direct and indirect support to the forces of censorship, when a constitutional amendment to ban flag-burning is equated with patriotism and when even staunch progressives don't want to support the right of musicians and artists to say and do things most of us find offensive, politicians like Barbara Boxer, Nancy Pelosi and Ron Dellums, who come from safe, liberal districts where free-speech stands won't cost them many votes, have a responsibility to do more than vote the right way. They ought to be screaming bloody murder, shouting as loud and as long as Jesse Helms, making free speech as much of a national crusade as Helms has made censorship.

We're pleased to hear that our local representatives will vote against the censors. But we're still waiting for one of them to do what the other side has done, and declare the moral equivalent of war.

Dellums, Bates and the next mayor

NOT SO long ago, East Bay political types talked constantly about the "Dellums-Bates Machine" — more often than not, with a fair amount of respect.

Ron Dellums, the Congressman from Oakland, and Tom Bates, the Assemblyman from Berkeley, had a political operation capable of putting serious, committed progressives into key local offices and passing important new local policy initiatives. They helped build Berkeley Citizens Action into a national model for left-liberal involvement in city and county electoral politics. In many ways, Dellums and Bates were more successful using their political influence at home than they were making policy changes in Sacramento and Washington.

But the Dellums-Bates Machine just ain't what it used to be. Over the past few years, the progressive coalition that dominated East Bay politics has been fractured by internal dissent and frustrated by a series of failures. When the Alameda County supervisors voted last year to replace the late John George, a key Dellums-Bates ally, with Warren Widener, a former BCA foe, instead of Dellums aide Keith Carson, many saw the writing on the wall. ("Why did the supervisors spit in Ron's and Tom's faces and reject their guy?" asked one veteran political observer. "It's simple: They did it because they could. That's what's changed around here.")

To some extent, their crumbling political empire is a sort of backhanded tribute to Dellums and Bates, who haven't been terribly fond of the sort of heavy-handed power plays that kept Phil Burton in control of San Francisco's Democratic Party for many years. To some extent, it's a function of the natural anarchic tendencies of Berkeley politics.

But we're getting the distinct feeling that it also reflects a growing sense of caution among Dellums, Bates and the BCA leadership, a fear of taking the sort of risks that were once their political trademark.

Dellums and Bates both declined to endorse a candidate in the recent Oakland mayoral election. That's remarkable: The next mayor of Oakland will play a critical role in shaping the city's future.

Based on the issues, and on his record, Wilson Riles Jr. should have been the obvious choice. We realize that Dellums, Bates and their advisors were concerned about the unprofessional and ineffective nature of the Riles campaign. But leaving Oakland in the hands of Elihu Harris or Lionel Wilson was no solution; if they couldn't help Riles run a credible campaign, they should have tried to talk him out of running and found a candidate who could carry the progressive banner better.

We're not fans of machine politics, but we'd hate to see the East Bay's progressive coalition, built over so many years with the efforts of so many committed folks, fall by the wayside. If Dellums and Bates don't like the quality of local progressive leadership, whom do they have to blame?

Let's face it: Elihu Harris would be a disaster for Oakland, a repeat of Lionel Wilson. Riles may not be perfect, but he's far better than Harris, and he's the best we've got. Dellums and Bates ought to quit playing it safe, and give Oakland's underdog progressive a fighting chance.

Breaking voting barriers

Although I appreciate receiving the endorsement of the Bay Guardian for the Democratic nomination for California Secretary of State, I am surprised at being damned with such faint praise in terms of my support for programs to increase voter participation (see Bay Guardian, 5/23/90). The fact is, as Secretary of State, I sponsored and implemented the most significant change of procedures in this century with respect to voter outreach registration by mail. I also supported and have implemented the liberalization of California's vote-by-mail law that occurred in 1978. In the last election, some 14 percent of the votes cast were with absentee voter ballots. I have also led the way in California with respect to implementing the Federal Voting Accessibility for the Elderly and Handicapped Act as well as the minority language provisions of the Voting Rights Act.

Utilizing the opportunities offered by our registration-by-mail system, I have pioneered voter registration card distribution programs that have become a model for the nation. Several states, for example, have adopted my toll-free registration card request line (1-800-345-VOTE) approach. Many states have also followed my lead in involving the private sector (retailers, for example) as card distributors and voter participation promoters. Ditto with respect to other programs directed at our young people such as slogan and poster contests and other efforts to involve schools as focal points for registration and voter education.

Republican opposition and veto power have blocked several other programs that I have championed. These include "motor voter," agency-based registration, postal change-of-address updating and election-day registration. I will continue to lead the way in terms of encouraging all citizens in the electoral process by eliminating barriers to participation that currently exist.

Yahoo bikers get lost

Regarding Bob Ivry's article on the Mt. Tam mountain-biking controversy (see Bay Guardian, 5/30/90) — who are you trying to kid? Allowing bicycles on single-track trails would be a disaster for those of us who walk to a slower drummer.

If the wider roads are overcrowded now, won't the single-track trails be jammed once bicycles are allowed on them? If the 15 mph speed limit on the roads can't be effectively enforced, how can we expect compliance with the proposed 5 mph speed limit on the trails? Even if all the so-called "yahoo bikers" were miraculously converted to models of courtesy and restraint, 5 mph is still twice as fast as the average person walks. Regardless of the speed limit, hikers and strollers would constantly be forced to step off the trail to let bikers (dozens? hundreds?) go by.

Blaming "yahoo bikers" for the problem is comparable to gun nuts saying that if only we'd lock up all the criminals it would be OK for the rest of us to carry AK-47s. Bicycles are made for speed — that's what makes the sport so exciting. If not for the thrill, why not walk?

I have no objection to people riding bicycles in places where bicycle riding is appropriate. I'll concede the roads, as long as these sportspersons give minimum consideration to safety, but there's no good reason for wheeled vehicles of any kind to be on single-track dirt trails. There are plenty of places to ride bicycles in the Bay Area, but few where a person can walk peacefully, as slowly as she wants, without interruption and just savor the sights, sounds and smells of nature.

Ivry points out that a person can get a bike and helmet for as little as $300. But you can go for a walk in the woods for absolutely no cash outlay at all. Maybe that's the problem — there's no profit in pedestrians. Maybe that's why we're in danger of extinction due to destruction of habitat.

AIDS conference: The Sixth International Conference on AIDS begins June 20th, and there will be almost as much activity outside Moscone Center as inside. ACT UP, the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power, and other activist organizations have targeted the conference to draw attention to discriminatory Immigration and Naturalization Service policies against people with the HIV virus and to publicize problems with the conference and many of the nation's leading AIDS researchers. More background on the controversy, see stories on pages 15 and 17. Individual groups will be doing their own street theater and civil disobedience, but activists have also planned daily mass demonstrations: Wednesday/20 — Demonstration against restricted access to medical research, treatment and the conference to people with HIV/AIDS. 2:30 pm. Moscone Center, Howard at Fourth St., SF. Thursday/21 — March and demonstration to expose crumbling "San Francisco model" of AIDS care, government inaction and corporate profiteering. 11 am. AIDS/ARC Vigil, United Nations Plaza, Civic Center, SF. Friday/22 — Demonstration against exclusion of women, children and people of color from research, treatment and services. 11:30 am. Market at Fourth St., marching to Moscone Center, SF. Saturday/23 — HIV/AIDS Unity March: A United Call to Action. 9:30 am. Civic Center Plaza, marching to Justin Herman Plaza, SF. Sunday/24 — Demonstration in response to U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan's address to the conference. 11:30 am. CONGRESS PLAYS POLITICS WITH CONSTITUTION AND THE FLAG

NOW THAT the Supreme Court has decided that burning, shredding, trampling and spitting on the American flag are protected acts under the First Amendment, Republicans in Congress are once again mounting their own campaign against free speech by pushing for a constitutional amendment to protect the flag from desecration.

In Washington, where politicians rarely debate real issues, congressional observers say Republicans are lining up votes behind the amendment for political reasons — as a way of discrediting free speech liberals as un-American during the upcoming fall elections. Senator Robert Dole (R-Kansas), who is sponsoring the amendment, admitted as much recently when he warned his colleagues that those who stand up for free speech will become easy targets in 30-second TV spots this election season.

With the Fourth of July just around the corner, those who would weaken the most important principle of democracy for the sake of vote-getting may gather the two-thirds majority in both houses needed to alter the Constitution. As of Flag Day last week, the amendment had the support of 48 senators, mostly from southern states and the West, including 13 Democrats, with Howell Heflin of Alabama leading the way.

Congressional observers say momentum in Congress is building each day for passage of the amendment, with a vote expected before July 4th.

"It will be close, but it's not a foregone conclusion," said Lee Halterman, aide to Representative Ron Dellums. "We just need half of the Democrats to say no, and they won't get the two-thirds vote they need."

Not surprisingly, California Democratic gubernatorial candidate Dianne Feinstein, who rarely if ever takes an unpopular stand, wants to constitutionally protect the flag, as does her like-minded Republican opponent, Senator Pete Wilson.

"She feels that desecrating the flag isn't a matter of free speech," said Feinstein Chief of Staff Hadley Roff.

Said Wilson: "The Democratic leadership will be hard-pressed to try and stop this measure now. It is the only alternative we have. Without it, the flag will remain completely unprotected."

Wilson is continuing to push for legislation he introduced in June 1989 that would add a one-sentence article to the Constitution. It reads, "The Congress shall have the power to protect the integrity and dignity of the flag of the U.S. by appropriate legislation." California's other senator, Majority Whip Alan Cranston, strongly opposes the amendment. Said Cranston, "It would be utterly unconscionable to weaken the true essence of our democracy — our Bill of Rights — in order to protect the mere symbol.... I did not come to this U.S. Senate to water down the Bill of Rights and I will not engage in any actions that lead to that."

Bay Area representatives Barbara Boxer, Nancy Pelosi, Ron Dellums and George Miller stand firmly on the side of free speech. On the House floor, Boxer denounced Dole's statement that a vote against the amendment would make for bad press. "The Republicans do not seem to understand that it is our Constitution and our Bill of Rights that make us special, that make our flag special."

Dellums aide Halterman said, "Dellums sees the flag as a potent symbol...and feels that denying people access to that symbol is counterproductive to the values that the flag represents."

According to Pelosi's aide Michael Yaki, letters and phone calls are running 9-to-1 against the amendment.

IS THIS GLOBAL WARMING STUFF FOR REAL? ASK THE GOLDEN TOAD

MONTEVERDE, COSTA RICA BIOLOGISTS LIVING in the misty cloud forest high up in the Monteverde mountains of Costa Rica fear that the celebrated golden toad, a small, brilliant-orange amphibian found only in one square mile of this region, is on the verge of becoming extinct.

While scientists heatedly debate theories about global warming, the disappearance of species like the golden toad in remote mountain habitats offers important confirmation that global climatic change is indeed taking place.

"It isn't as if we were talking about a problem caused by a dam project, or pollution from a nearby factory," says Gary Diller, an American biologist who has lived at Monteverde for 20 years.

The reason for the golden toad's disappearance, Diller and others say, is increasing levels of ultraviolet radiation entering the earth's atmosphere due to ozone depletion. "Amphibians are highly susceptible to ultraviolet radiation," Diller reports. "The ozone hole is, perhaps, the key reason why the golden toad has not been seen since 1987."

The effects of increased ultraviolet radiation on tropical environments are unknown. What has been documented, however, is that exposure to higher levels of ultraviolet radiation in temperate-zone climates results in increased skin cancer and eye damage to humans and decreased agricultural production. Biologists speculate that these effects are magnified in areas lying closer to the equator, which are already exposed to higher levels of ultraviolet radiation than more temperate areas.

Federal law is national law. . . . Why should there be one kind of law for an oil spill in Puget Sound and another in San Francisco Bay?

The plight of the golden toad is shared by other amphibians in the Monteverde cloud forest. The marlequin frog and the glass frog, which live within a few miles of the golden toad, have also disappeared in recent years.

Diller, as well as other naturalists living in the reserve, cite altered weather patterns at Monteverde as another possible factor behind the decimation of the amphibian populations. "Since 1987, the rainy season comes later and is shorter," notes Michael Fogden, a naturalist photographer who lives on the outskirts of the reserve.

"The mist pools are high and dry. This cuts precious time for the breeding cycle of most frogs," Diller states. "The golden toad cannot miss too many breeding seasons. If it doesn't return this year, then it is almost certain to become extinct in its natural habitat."

"Frogs are important because they are the first to die when dramatic changes in the environment occur," says Mexican environmental preservationist Jorge Canto. "If the golden toad becomes extinct, even when everything humanly possible to protect its environment has been done, it does not bode well for environmental efforts."

Adds Diller, "How can you protect the earth if the ozone is destroyed? If the frogs go, we follow."

HOST OF AIDS CONFERENCE SUED FOR ILLEGAL HIV DISCRIMINATION

THE CHOICE of the San Francisco Marriott Hotel as venue for the Sixth International AIDS Conference might seem an ironic turn of events to former Marriott room-service waiter David F. Farris, if he were still alive.

According to the attorney who handled his case, Farris died of AIDS in March 1989, less than a year after accepting an out-of-court settlement of his lawsuit against the Marriott Corporation for unlawful employment practices. In the suit, Farris alleged that the Marriott's Desert Springs resort in Palm Desert forced him to take an unpaid leave of absence after he told them he was infected with HIV.

At one point, the suit alleged, the hotel indicated it might reassign Farris to a non-food handling job, citing the potential loss of business if his condition were made public.

During this time, Farris had his physician's approval to continue working and written assurance that his condition posed no risk to fellow employees or resort clientele.

The suit alleged further that the resort's personnel director quoted from a written company policy that permitted the dismissal of employees who had AIDS. The details of the settlement remain undisclosed as a condition of the settlement.

Mark Lauer, director of marketing for the San Francisco Marriott Hotel, denies the existence of such a policy. Lauer, who refused to comment specifically on the Farris suit because he is unfamiliar with its details, said the Marriott's policy of nondiscrimination on the basis of AIDS is the same now as it was in 1987.

"The policy [for HIV infection] is the same as for all medically disabled employees," he said. "They can work as long as they're able to in whatever position they may be. And [the company] will continue to find them positions [they can perform] as long as they are able to work at the same rate of pay."

The San Francisco Marriott Hotel expects to accommodate 1,300 guests as a result of the AIDS conference, earning the hotel roughly $750,000 in sales, he said. The hotel will also be the site of numerous AIDS conference sessions.

LOGGING LOBBY BEHIND MOVE TO SPLIT 9TH CIRCUIT COURT

A MOVE TO divide the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has become a stalking horse for the debate between environmentalists and lumber interests in the Pacific Northwest.

Claiming that judges with "California attitudes" don't understand trees, politicians from Washington and Oregon are pushing for a separate federal Circuit Court that doesn't include this state.

Senators Mark Hatfield and Bob Packwood of Oregon and Senator Slade Gorton of Washington have introduced S. 948, which would reduce the 9th Circuit — currently covering California, Arizona, Nevada, Idaho, Washington, Montana, Alaska, Oregon, Hawaii, Guam and the Northern Mariana Islands — to just the first three states, with the others forming a new 12th Circuit.

By any measure (geography, number of judges, caseload, population) the 9th Circuit is currently the largest in made timely by a recent oil spill, this time off the coast of Texas. AB 2603 would institute a $1 billion credit line for oil spill clean-up and damage costs and make the oil transporters financially responsible for such accidents up to $750 million. Monterey Bay sanctuary:

President Bush is having a hard time proving to Rep. Leon Panetta (D-Monterey) that he's the Environmental President. Since 1988, Panetta has been trying to have the Monterey Bay designated a National Marine Sanctuary, but the decision has been held up by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's inability to produce a draft environmental impact statement, the first step in the designation process. This hold-up is due in part to the Interior and Energy departments' opposition to the NOAA proposal for a ban on oil and gas drilling in the bay. On Feb. 26th, Panetta sent a telegram to President Bush asking him to fulfill his commitment to the environment by releasing the regulations for the Monterey Bay as originally proposed by the NOAA. To date, there has been no response from the White House. Info.: Save Our Shores (see number above).

the United States. Advocates for the legislation say it is simply too large, and cite case backlogs, excessive traveling by judges and a "breakdown in judicial collegiality" as the main impetus for the split. The 9th takes an average of 15.9 months to handle a case, considerably more than the 10.2 months average nationwide.

Opponents of the legislation — including both California senators and a majority of the judges in the 9th Circuit — claim that simply splitting the current court won't ease the backlog of cases, which is a result of administrative torpor. "The clerks here are real slow," said Chief Judge Alfred Goodwin, "and the shorthand reporters aren't too anxious to get out of their habits and get more modern."

Many feel, however, that a number of recent environmental decisions against lumber industry interests — including the holdup last year of the sale of more than 8 million acres of old-growth forest — are the real impetus for the move to split the court. Fourteen of the 27 judges in the 9th are from California and have, according to Gorton, environmentalist "California attitudes," so a split could give Oregon and Washington judges more sympathetic to the lumber industry.

Meanwhile, spokespeople for the "California attitude" are crying foul play. "Those who seek to gerrymander the 9th Circuit are apparently attempting to gain some advantage in the courts against those who want to protect the environment," Senator Pete Wilson told a hearing in Washington in March. Judge Goodwin was quoted in Northwestern news accounts agreeing that the motivation for the bill was to create a court that would issue more lenient environmental rulings, adding that the timber industry was pushing the proposal.

While Senators Hatfield and Gorton deny that the 9th's decisions have anything to do with the proposed legislation, Hatfield said in a recent Senate Judiciary Committee hearing, "The goal is not to avoid differences of opinion on legal issues [but to] foster reasoned decisions (which take into account the social, economic and historical circumstances from which legal issues arise) by judges who share similar backgrounds and experiences."

Or as Portland lawyer Philip Chadsey, who worked on the spotted owl case, put it, Southern California judges "don't understand trees, other than they're nice to look at. They don't understand the importance of the timber industry. They fail to balance the hardships involved."

Mark Rutzick, another Portland lawyer who often represents timber and energy companies and has been outspoken in his support of the split, claimed that most Californians "are simply unable to understand the concept of resource dependency because it is so totally alien to their life experience." Presumably, the people in Guam and the Mariana Islands — who, with the Pacific Northwest, would become part of the new 12th Circuit — are more familiar with that concept.

Chief Judge Goodwin disputes the regional identity argument: "Federal law is national law. The whole reason people go to court in diversity cases is to avoid hometown law. Why should there be one kind of law for an oil spill in Puget Sound and another in San Francisco Bay?"

AT CITY HALL

BY JIM BALDERSTON

DISASTER OF THE WEEK

When the wind is just right, and you listen carefully, you can hear an eerie sound emanating from City Hall these days. At first, I thought it was an animal that had been mortally wounded. Then I thought it might be the mating call of some obscure species that used to inhabit the old Mission swamp, where City Hall now rests.

But I was wrong. I forgot that it's budget season.

The sound was that of wounded bureaucrats reacting to budget cuts made by the Board of Supervisors' Finance Committee. Leading the charge is Supervisor Terence Hallinan, who has been exceptionally adept at finding — and cutting — bureaucratic fat. Hallinan has been so successful that several longtime City Hall budget watchers have called Hallinan "the most well-informed supervisor on the budget in the past ten years."

Hallinan is playing no favorites. Included in his list of proposed cuts is a half-million dollar item from the Board of Supervisors' own budget: Three policy analysts and their assistant from the board's budget. These analysts recently came on line, costing the city about $500,000 a year in salaries and office expenses.

Coincidentally, that half-million is the same amount of money it would cost to keep two very important city programs open and running next year — the Sharon Art Studio and the nine city-run swimming pools run by the Recreation and Park Department (see Play by Play, page 33). The mayor's budget cut funding completely for the studio and reduced funding for the pools, forcing the pools to close during certain hours.

The irony of the situation is not lost on Hallinan, who believes those two programs serve a much greater need than three policy analysts.

Sharon Art Studio is a $260,000 item. The pools cost about $230,000. Both programs are used by seniors, low-income families and other people unable to afford similar services from the private sector. No one will deny these programs provide a great deal of joy and comfort to their patrons.

It's not surprising that some board members oppose Hallinan's proposal. The city needs its pools and art studios more than the board needs its analysts. But if the board votes to keep its staff, it's thousands of San Franciscans who would lose out in the end. And that would be a disaster.

— Jim Balderston

The budget zoo

IF THE San Francisco supervisors really want to raise some new revenue for the city, perhaps they should sell tickets to the budget hearings. The hearings, by all accounts, have degenerated into a circus.

Let's start at the beginning. By law, the mayor must present a balanced budget to the Board of Supervisors. That means, in rough terms, that revenues have to equal expenditures; unlike the United State government, the City and County of San Francisco can't borrow money to make it from year to year.

This year, however, Mayor Agnos has prepared a budget based in part on revenue sources like the proposed parking tax increase that have not yet been approved by the supervisors. In other words, Agnos is counting on money that the board may not authorize. The board's budget analyst, Harvey Rose, has expressed concern about that: Since the ordinances raising the new revenues aren't approved, he says, the budget isn't really balanced.

Rose isn't just nitpicking: There's a very good chance that some of the proposed taxes and increased fees won't pass the board.

The City Attorney's Office, however, has advised the mayor that a budget based on uncertain, yet-to-be-approved revenues is just fine, so the process continues.

A bowl of mush

IN TALKING to various City Hall types about the budget process and specific budget items, a consistent complaint is that the budget remains murky and that the mayor hasn't made the hard decisions yet. If the new tax and fee proposals don't make it through the board, where will the money come from? If they do, where will it all go?

One person told me that the status of the budget is "fluid." Another called the whole thing "mush."

Or, as a veteran budget observer put it, "It's unclear where the revenue is coming from, and it's completely unclear where it's going to be spent. There has been no political foundation laid for some of these revenue sources."

Before presenting his budget to the board on June 1st, the mayor warned a number of groups that wanted higher budgets for their programs that they could not simply come in and ask for more money, but "would have to find the money themselves."

A daunting task, to say the least. But at least one group decided to do so.

Coleman Advocates, which has lobbied extensively for more programs for the city's children, took a hard look at the entire budget and identified funds from other departments that could be used for prenatal care, mental health, health services, drug intervention, jobs programs and the like.

Some of Coleman's proposed "Children's Budget" money came from the Department of Public Health, some from the Police Department and some even from cutting the mayor's Office of Public Safety, which Coleman's executive director, Margaret Brodtkin, claims no longer has to be funded at its present level of $350,000 since it no longer has huge amounts of federal money to administer.

But despite the mayor's promise, it looks as if Brodtkin will not get much of the funding that she seeks. She told me that not only is the mayor's budget for children a "disaster," but that Agnos has deliberately tried to mislead the public into thinking that he is spending more on children.

Six assertions of increased funding Agnos makes in his budget message that are patently untrue, Brodtkin says, including increases in after-school, library, employment, health and prenatal programs. In every case, she says, the programs either were cut or not increased in any way.

Brodtkin has also compiled a list of programs that the mayor flatly rejected or never even considered.

Brodtkin may be a victim of a very deliberate budget strategy employed by Agnos. One City Hall observer said the present confusion over the budget suits Agnos just fine. "This budget is designed to wear people down," the observer said. "Once they are worn down they will grasp at and take anything."

Hennessey surrenders

GRANDSTANDING AND impassioned speech-making are the order of the day. With the budget tight (Agnos had to cut deeply to find enough money to cover the projected $42 million deficit), interest groups and department heads have gone to great lengths to plead their cases before the Finance Committee.

So the hearings have dragged on, well behind schedule, and department heads have been forced to wait for as much as two days for their turn to speak. Some of the delays have been caused by extensive debate over of such weighty matters as whether the Coroner's Office should have a vending machine.

One observer noted that everyone in City Hall is "already sick of the budget, and it's only the first week."

One such person must be Sheriff Mike Hennessey. After listening to lengthy debate about his department, Hennessey finally decided to give up. He stood up, pulled out a white handkerchief and waved it at the committee. "You've taken it all," he said. "What's left? I surrender."

This week at City Hall appears weekly in the Bay Guardian. Tips, information and suggestions for upcoming events and items can be sent in care of Jim Balderston, Bay Guardian, 520 Hampshire St., SF 94110, or leave a message at 255-3100.

GAY MATTERS

The mayor's drop-dead AIDS budget

By David Israels

OUR MAYOR loves to call himself a "progressive." I know because I've heard him do it on numerous occasions. A little smile even creeps across his swarthy, not-quite handsome face when he invokes this political mantra.

He used it at a press conference just the other day, as he often does, to introduce some self-serving blather. "This progressive mayor" was how he phrased it, referring to himself in the imperial third person.

The phrase, though, is more than just a verbal tic. It's intended, I suspect, to remind his listeners that the real Art Agnos is supposed to still be with us.

You remember the real Art. That great progressive. Defender of us little people. Advocate for the sick and the poor. Protector of the disenfranchised. That lovely picture some 70 percent of us so joyfully purchased in 1987.

So now what do you call this mayor of ours, who declares AIDS a "medical earthquake" and then lets the roof fall in on some of its most needy victims?

What do you call this mayor who makes a campaign pledge to spend city money for AZT, the only approved drug that fights the AIDS virus, and then, when the bill is about to come due, says that's the federal government's problem?

What do you call this mayor who promises in his campaign that one of his "primary goals" is "assuring treatment... for all those with... HIV infections" and then produces an AIDS budget that denies those treatments to thousands of infected San Franciscans?

You've got to call him what he is: Fake Art, the Papier-mache Progressive.

NOW, DON'T get me wrong. I'm not a one of your typical Agnos-haters. Down at the Bay Guardian office, I'm generally known as an Agnos advocate. That's because I don't swallow all the criticism about him in this otherwise-flawless publication. Let's face it: The guy's not all bad, maybe not even mostly bad.

But when it comes to his latest AIDS budget, I have a hard time defending him.

Not that his people don't try. His major mouthpiece, Scott Shafer, says Agnos has produced a "progressive budget." And Susan Ehrlich, assistant to the mayor for health budget matters, insists it provides "significant increases" in city AIDS spending. Ehrlich says the budget will go up in August from an estimated $12.4 million to $17.2 million.

So what's the beef?

Well, let's say you're one of the unlucky, uninsured 6,000 San Franciscans infected with the HIV AIDS virus. You're not sick yet. But you are desperate. That's because you know you're a ticking viral time bomb. Without treatment — regular lab tests, doctor's visits, AZT and other drugs — it's likely the AIDS virus will soon detonate in your body, and you'll get AIDS.

Unfortunately, you don't have medical insurance to pay for the treatments. And you can't afford the $5,000 yearly bill. So you've got to rely on the city's public health system.

And guess what? The system's not very reliable.

In the next fiscal year, the city may be able to treat about 1,000 of you. Another 2,000 will get help if — and it's a big if — nine nonprofit clinics, already scraping for money, agree to take on the burden. That means you have a 50-50 chance of being denied the life saving treatments you need.

For those on the losing end of this treatment crashshoot, the mayor's "progressive" spending plan may look a lot more like a "drop dead" budget than anything else.

Politically, the mayor can get away with a drop-dead AIDS budget because the city's AIDS and gay activists have offered no serious opposition to the mayor:

■ You won't hear a peep out of most AIDS service organizations. They're either focused myopically on their own concerns or they're fearful that speaking out will endanger their city funding.

■ Leaders of most of the gay political clubs have long been in Agnos's pocket. Their loyal opposition is by its very nature ineffective.

■ ACT UP has largely ignored local issues, fixated as the group has been on demonstrating at this week's Sixth International AIDS Conference.

■ Gay supervisor Harry Britt has been trying behind the scenes to squeeze a few more AIDS dollars out of Agnos. But so far the mayor has easily outmaneuvered him.

THUS, FAKE Art reigns over the Mayor's Office, and when it comes to the HIV infected, he's quite willing to gamble with people's lives.

Here's how the game works:

Though it will take about $30 million a year to treat those 6,000 HIV infected people, the mayor is throwing in only about a million bucks in city money. That way he looks like he's doing something, while also being fiscally prudent.

At the same time, he's betting that the feds will cough up the big money. Though the House and Senate have both passed AIDS disaster relief bills, it's unclear how much the city will get or when. We might get $70 million, or maybe just $20 million. The money may arrive in four months, or 10 months, or maybe never if the package gets lost in the economic summit.

The problem is that infected people can't wait for the feds to stop fiddling, because for them Rome's already burning. When it comes to AIDS, time is the enemy. We will likely never know how many infected people got AIDS and died while the mayor waited for the federal government to come to the rescue. But surely some will.

What's inexcusable is that Agnos could have acted long ago. Last January, his AIDS Task Force told him about the horrible lack of money to treat the HIV-infected. He could've used that report to build a city consensus to accept new taxes in order to save lives. Instead, Agnos threw away precious time covering his political behind, trying to shunt the problem onto the federal government.

The posturing began less than a week after the task force report came out. Agnos told a House budget committee hearing, "This city cannot do it alone... In my opinion, the battle against AIDS is a matter of our nation's defenses, and so far the record from Washington is to treat this as somebody else's war."

Those are fine words, but they can't obscure the fact that on the early-treatment battlefield, Agnos has gone AWOL. Maybe that's not so surprising. After all, when it comes to putting money where his "progressive" mouth is, this town hasn't seen much of the real Art Agnos lately.

The AIDS conference: Inside and Out

Rarely do scientific gatherings attract the controversy of the Sixth International AIDS Conference. Participants and protesters talk about what the conference will accomplish — and what it won't

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20th marks the opening of the Sixth International AIDS Conference, and rarely has a scientific gathering been marked by so much controversy. In addition to 12,000 conference delegates, San Francisco will be flooded with hundreds of activists intent on questioning the conference's agenda and drawing national media attention to agendas of their own.

The conference is a critically important event. It brings together the leading AIDS researchers from around the world and activists hope it will also focus public debate over the scope and direction of research efforts and the extent of governmental support for the fight against the disease.

Several months ago, when AIDS activists became incensed over an Immigration and Naturalization Service ban against people infected with the Human Immunodeficiency Virus, dozens of groups, mostly service organizations, decided to boycott the conference to protest the government policy restricting the travel and immigration rights of people infected with HIV.

Other activists, including many members of ACT UP, the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power, see the conference as a venue to question the lack of progress on AIDS drug research and to demand that researchers and doctors work more closely with people who have HIV disease.

The Bay Guardian interviewed four people with different perspectives on the conference and the concurrent protests — a conference organizer, an activist who will be participating in the conference, an activist who will be protesting outside the conference and a representative of an organization that has decided to stay away.

■ Peter Staley, a member of ACT UP New York's Treatment and Data Committee, is scheduled to address the opening session of the conference. A former bond trader, he helped shut down the New York Stock Exchange Sept. 14th to protest the high price of AZT.

■ Dr. John Ziegler, an AIDS researcher, is conference chair. He is chief of staff for education at the Veterans Administration Hospital in San Francisco and a professor of medicine at the University of California at San Francisco.

■ Holly Smith is director of media and special projects for the Shanti Project, which was the first major AIDS service organization to decide to boycott the conference.

■ Allyson Hunter is co-founder of ACT UP Seattle and of the Seattle needle exchange program. She will be demonstrating outside the conference.

We asked each of them why the conference was important — for what will be going on, and for what won't.

— Craig McLaughlin

PETER STALEY

ACT UP New York made a decision to participate in this conference and also to, when appropriate, make a statement, either visual or otherwise, about some of the things we're upset about. I don't see what difference it would have made to add our name to an already incredibly long list of boycotting organizations.

The INS policy is something, obviously, that we'll be making a statement on inside the conference, and we have disagreements with some of the leading principal investigators involved in AIDS research. The Gang of Five, as we call them, have sided entirely with antivirals, specifically the analogs like

AZT and its sister drugs.

Thus far, 80 percent of the research that's gone on has been AZT-oriented. That drug was approved in 1987 and it's been reaping a great deal of profits for its maker, Burroughs Wellcome. Any further questions on AZT should be answered by Burroughs with Burroughs money. Federal government money should be used to look for new drugs.

AZT, ddI, ddC, alpha interferon, CD4 — those are basically the only drugs that are going to be covered at the conference. Immunomodulators are going to be practically ignored and drugs to fight the opportunistic infections that are actually killing us are going to be given very little attention.

When you look at the conference

DR. JOHN ZIEGLER

THE CONFERENCE is evolving from a venue where the scientists were puzzling about some of the research questions into a major convocation of virtually all the scientific disciplines, ranging from clinical sciences to epidemiology, prevention, social and behavioral sciences to even the science of how policy is developed. This has become a multidisciplinary convocation and that's the reason it has great value.

We are in deep sympathy with the boycotting groups. I guess if we could, we would have boycotted ourselves, but we were too far along in planning and in commitment to the conference by the time the immigration policy was enacted to really back off without preprogram that's been handed out thus far, it's shocking to see how much similarity there is between the program in San Francisco and the ACTG [AIDS Clinical Trials Group] program, as far as where the priorities are. Researchers have to take some chances; they're going to have to fail sometimes. But if they look at all these drugs and do just small, quick looks at them, they can answer a lot of questions. And when they fail, it won't have cost much.

We want the Gang of Five and we want other AIDS researchers to sit down with us. We want them to come out of their ivory towers and listen to some of the points we have to make. All they see are these wild demonstrators on TV and the don't realize that we know what we're talking about.

We also want to deliver a message to the Bush administration. They're soft-pedaling the problem, just like the Reagan administration did, because they're basically gun-shy of how the far-right will react if they treat this like the medical disaster that it is. What we've been asking for is something like a Manhattan Project, where the top scientists in the country are sent off to some not-too-expensive laboratory near a large patient population and don't come out until they have a cure. We need some leadership to get something like that done, and we've just never had it.

All the media's going to be there [at the conference] and when ACT UP does something, people have a hard time not noticing it. We'll be doing things on the inside and on the outside that will be impossible to ignore. That's how we'll get our issue across.

serious consequences. We went forward on the hope that by using the conference as a lever, we might be able to persuade the government to overturn the policy. There were two or three waves of changes brought about by pressure from the conference and from many groups, but the changes were not sufficient to satisfy the boycotters and we concur.

The boycotters' absence from the conference is a detriment because we don't get contributions from their perspective and they in turn are unable to take back with them some of the newer advances that are being reported. Nevertheless, the conference will go on.

We strived to achieve a balance in the program and anyone looking at the program from one particular vantage would find fault. Equality of dissatisfaction is our goal here. The reason a lot of the emphasis in the conference is on the antivirals is because there is a lot of new data.

We recognize and acknowledge the great strides that have been made by advocacy groups in many areas. And there's no question that the advocacy groups go with the territory. I think they're going to have to strike a delicate balance between calling attention to their cause and disrupting the flow of information.

We have 12,000 delegates who have paid a lot of money to come here and learn about AIDS — and if the learning process is disturbed by physical or vocal disruptions, then I think probably the delegates are going to be quite upset. Our first obligation as the conference organizers is clearly not to tolerate disruptions inside the conference center. The delegates have come a long way to hear what they want to hear.

On the other hand, out on the street demonstrators are more than welcome. We have cordoned off a large area near the Moscone Center. There will be plenty of press coverage and ample opportunity for all the groups to display their concerns. A major effort has been made to accommodate the advocacy groups in our planning and we've given out 375 scholarships to persons with HIV.

I BELIEVE we were the first community-based AIDS service organization in the United States to announce our decision. We did so on Jan. 24th of this year. Our decision came from a groundswell of concern and interest from our volunteers, clients and staff. People were very very upset that the INS policy was not getting any public attention. It was pure discrimination, and so from our desire to support people with HIV around the globe, we made our decision.

It was a very unusual decision because the Shanti Project does not normally take such public stands on a political issue or a policy issue of this kind. We have a very defined and narrowly focused mission, which is to provide direct support services for people with AIDS and disabling HIV infection.

There have been very limited changes in the INS regulations that we view as basically inaction. It's important to remember that when we talk about the INS policy, we're not just talking about visitors to the United States, we are also talking about people who are currently residing in our borders but who are not full citizens and who have applied for naturalization or citizenship. If they are tested positive for HIV then their application process can be denied.

We have in the past attended the conference with a few volunteers, clients and staff that we were able to afford to send. However, very few people were able to go because it is very expensive. The biggest part that we're not participating in is the networking with other direct service providers and grassroots education organizations. However, a lot of people are also coming here to Shanti Project to visit us — we're just three blocks away from the conference site.

Most of the information at the conference does not directly apply to what we do on a daily basis. When there are scientific and medical breakthroughs, that affects us not because of that actual scientific development but because people who are our clients might live longer and therefore we'll need to find more volunteers.

We are not engaging in any of the boycott demonstrations or activities. We morally and ethically cannot justify taking our time to demonstrate against the conference, when we could in fact be spending our time doing what we're suppose to be doing. When all the media attention dies down and all the reporters go back home, we're still going to be here with the same burning, critical issue we always had — how do we find enough people to meet the demand as people live longer and people continue to be diagnosed?

ALLYSON HUNTER

I ORIGINALLY came down here not so much for the AIDS conference itself, but for the AIDS activist conference. It's a chance for national and international ACT UP groups to gather. This will be the first time they've ever had that opportunity. All of us are trying to figure out how to work as a grassroots organization, because ACT UP is still very young.

I also came down to have the opportunity to meet with women with HIV. I'm hoping that that will actually happen. Up in Seattle, the population of women with HIV is very small and closeted, so it's easy to feel like you're the only woman in the world who's going through this.

About 15 people from ACT UP Seattle have taken time off to come down. We're going to demonstrate outside the conference. The only reason that some people might go inside is to disrupt and I don't even know if anyone from our group is going to do that. Mostly we're planning street theater, direct action, creative agitation sort of actions.

We're frustrated at the government's stance on HIV testing around entrance to the United States and that really becomes a gay-bashing or racist implementation. If you're from Haiti or they perceive you as being gay, they ask you to be tested. If not, you can cruise through.

There's also a lot of frustration that a billion dollars has gone into drug research and so very few drugs have come out. There's no place to go with AIDS if you're angry, and so the closest thing that you can do is you can come down to where all the scientists gather and let people know how the people really feel.

Some people say we're fighting the wrong people, but people are becoming very disenchanted with their health care now. It seems like doctors are becoming more hostile and patients are becoming more aggravated. It's easy to feel powerless with HIV because there's really relatively few treatments.

I think the frustration that people need to hear is that big business and the medical lobby, even if they have the best intentions, are in bed with one another. They spend lots and lots of money for relatively little success as far as we can see on the outside.

The big thing is that they still make the conference unavailable to people who have the disease and we're not ignoramuses. We read the medical journals, we are struggling through, and if we're not as trained it doesn't mean that we're not as educated.

I don't come here seeing the doctors as my enemies; I see them all as potential allies. It's not like I want to attack them per se, but when the people who set up this conference had it in a place where people with HIV couldn't attend, and they made it with a fee that people with HIV couldn't possibly afford, something had gone wrong.

I guess they don't want lay people in there messing around with them, but some of the best stuff about how to deal with people with AIDS has come up because people with AIDS have gotten together and found the treatment protocol themselves. Some people say that won't work, but people who are sick are finding that it is working. There's got to be much more of a willingness to work with the people who are infected in more than just a patient relationship. And that's really a great deal of the anger that will be focused here.

AIDS research bottleneck

There's no shortage of potential AIDS treatments. But federal bureaucracy keeps them from getting from the test tube to the people

By Mark Harrington

IN MARCH 1986, AIDS research turned a corner. The National Cancer Institute announced that a cancer drug reject, AZT, showed signs of slowing the disease. Fourteen other drugs were ready to be tested. In July, the federal government set up clinical testing sites around the country. In September, researchers cut short the AZT trial because of conclusive evidence that the drug prolonged life. Suddenly, there was hope. But now, four years and 60,000 could expect to live. In October 1988, ACT UP and other groups besieged the agency in a demonstration that won nationwide attention. Since then, four new treatments for secondary complications of AIDS have been approved in record time, and the FDA now permits wider distribution of drugs still being tested.

Now it's clear the delays start years before the FDA gets involved. The bottleneck is the ACTG. At every stage — from drug selection to designing and implementing trials to disseminating findings — the process is out of touch with the realities of AIDS.

therapy could mean a Nobel Prize. For drug companies, antiviral drugs have a much larger market than drugs for secondary infections.

People with AIDS have different priorities. Finding a "magic bullet" against HIV is a daunting task; some experts believe it is impossible. Medicine is better able to control bacteria and fungi than viruses, especially the new class of retroviruses like HIV.

It is not a question of ignoring antivirals, but of striking the right balance. This the ACTG has not done. As of Jan. 12th, a full 80 percent of patients in the ACTG's 101 studies have been Aerosolized pentamidine was ultimately tested by PWAs and their doctors. In just one year, these ad hoc community trials led to FDA approval. But between the ACTG's original designation of the treatment as a "high priority" and final approval, 16,000 PWAs in the United States had died of PCP.

TARGETING THE right drugs is just the first step. Trials must be designed, approved, enrolled and monitored; data must be collected, analyzed, published and made available to patients.

Between the ACTG's designation of pentamidine as a "high priority" and final approval, 16,000 PWAs had died of PCP.

deaths later, AZT is still the only approved treatment for HIV. Half the other 14 drugs, along with scores of newly discovered treatments, have yet to be tested.

Over those years, the U.S. has poured more than a quarter billion dollars into the AIDS Clinical Trials Group, a federally run consortium of drug-testing sites around the country. Set up to develop new treatments, the ACTG has managed only to test old drugs inefficiently and new drugs not at all.

■ AZT offers at most 18 months of remission; the ACTG has yet to produce a single alternative antiviral drug.

■ People with AIDS need drugs to rebuild their immune system; the ACTG has yet to produce a single immune booster.

■ People with AIDS are vulnerable to more than 24 infections and cancers; the ACTG has produced a new treatment for just one infection.

■ People with AIDS need drugs to ward off these infections; the ACTG has yet to produce a single preventive drug.

The future looks no brighter. The only new arrivals being widely tested are analogs of AZT. Many trials have become irrelevant to the changing standards of AIDS treatment. Up to 80 new trials are on indefinite hold. And the federal AIDS budget is facing unprecedented cuts.

Meanwhile, the number of AIDS cases is expected to nearly double this year, topping 200,000.

Critics of the federal AIDS effort first targeted the Food and Drug Administration, which took more time to license new drugs than many PWAs

U.S. MEDICAL RESEARCH is a high-stakes rat race. To win labs, assistants, medical journal bylines and prizes, scientists form networks of allies in government, academia and industry. Following the Reagan budget cuts of the early '80s, researchers already well connected with pharmaceutical companies were ahead of the pack. Though the ACTG was originally set up to provide an alternative to the private sector, it quickly became dominated by drug-industry veterans.

The National Institutes of Health is well aware of the potential for conflicts of interest. In December, NIH considered regulations that would have prohibited scientists from holding stock or options in companies whose products they were testing for the government. Martin Hirsch of Harvard, chair of an advisory committee that oversees the ACTG, testified against these guidelines but conceded that "nearly all of the ACTG principal investigators have some industrial consultative arrangements."

Asked to what extent large pharmaceutical companies influence the drug selection process, San Francisco ACTG researcher Donald Abrams said, "Money talks."

Yet it's too simple to say that medicine has been mortgaged to industry. The scientific goals of researchers and the economic goals of drug companies are often in harmony. Both are primarily interested in finding treatments that work against HIV, rather than against secondary infections. For researchers, a successful antiviral enrolled in studies of AZT, even though the drug has been on the market for three years. Only 2.5 percent have been in studies testing antivirals that take a different route of attack on the virus. The rest — just one-sixth of the ACTG total — were in studies testing drugs against secondary infections and cancers.

Nevertheless, Hirsch maintains, "In retrospect, the right trials were organized and carried out."

The ACTG has yielded some significant findings — that AZT slows the progression of the disease in people with no symptoms, and that half the originally recommended dose works well with fewer side effects. But considering the massive profits reaped by AZT's manufacturer, Burroughs Wellcome, it's a pity the ACTG did not let the company conduct the post-marketing studies.

Recently, the ACTG has expanded its antiviral efforts to ddI and ddC, two compounds related to AZT. But, like AZT, these drugs may have only limited usefulness.

Federal researchers should have, from the outset, asked, "What is killing most PWAs?" The answer was obvious — pneumocystis carinii pneumonia, which attacked 80 percent of PWAs, killing over half. In March 1987, the ACTG selected aerosol pentamidine, a potential preventive against PCP, as a high priority for testing. Nothing happened for 13 months. In congressional testimony, Anthony Fauci, who oversees the ACTG, blamed funding shortfalls: "Unfortunately, we just didn't have the staff."

founded data, it's no surprise that some pharmaceutical companies now hesitate to submit drugs for ACTG trials.

When an investigator does steer a trial through to completion, the data then must be analyzed. Until now, that task has been farmed out to Research Triangle Institute of North Carolina. But recently it became apparent RTI couldn't handle the job. The ACTG is currently transferring its data analysis operation to the Harvard School of Public Health.

ACTG Executive Committee Chair Larry Corey told an NIH oversight panel in January that due to the lack of complete data analysis, the ACTG has been, for the last year, "a body without a head."

This debacle casts shadow over all ACTG efforts. Of 101 trials conducted by the program, results from just 15 have been released. What's more, up to 80 studies scheduled to begin this winter have been placed on hold. NIH officials deny the data transfer is behind the freeze.

Fauci maintains that it is not a freeze but merely a chance to reassess the ACTG's progress so far: "What you're seeing isn't a slowing down, an ominous maneuver. But because the opportunities scientifically are going to outstrip the resources, we're going to have to take a look at all protocols in concept development."

One can only hope the ACTG, in making that reassessment, will address its most grievous oversight of all: the failure to get what it has learned out to patients fast enough.

Consider the case of low-dose AZT: In July, the NIH issued a press release describing preliminary information from a study showing that half the usual dose was safer and as effective (not to mention cheaper). But many doctors are reluctant to practice medicine by press release and investigators were apparently so preoccupied with other ACTG studies they did not completely analyze and pass on the data to Burroughs Wellcome until November. In December, Burroughs sent the results to the FDA, and in January the agency approved the lower dose.

ACTG OFFICIALS defend their record, saying the failure to produce new treatments results in part from the complexities of AIDS. Even a well-managed research network will run into blind alleys. But until all the data from various ACTG trials are analyzed, we won't even know how many of the ACTG's alleys have been blind. And, if the ACTG took more risks, it might find some winners.

With the shift of data analysis to Harvard, the ACTG has a chance to address its shortcomings. Yet at the same time, the program's budget is leveling out, perhaps even contracting. Last November, ACTG director Dan Hoth told the program's investigators: "For the next two years, our goal should be to conduct a limited number of key studies with a broad impact on the patient population. We must undertake a transition from unrestrained growth, and must scrutinize new ideas carefully."

If the ACTG is to become a leaner, meaner research machine, it should focus on getting new drugs out the door. That was its original mission, after all. "We give them until the San Francisco AIDS conference in June to turn around and deal with their scandalous mess like intelligent, compassionate human beings," ACT UP co-founder Larry Kramer said last March. "Then it's war."

At the YMCA we don't treat childcare like it's only child's play.

To us, child's play is serious business.

Which is why we design our childcare programs to be fun as well as educationally stimulating.

It's also why our professionally-trained leaders give children the individual attention and encouragement they need. And, why we teach them important social skills, like sharing and how to get along with others.

And since we have preschool, before and after school, and summer-time programs—like day camp—we have a program designed for all kinds of children.

So bring your children to the place that's as serious about childcare as you are.

BANNED IN THE USA?

If you thought the days of book-burning, obscenity arrests and restriction of artistic freedom were over, think again

REMEMBER JELLO Biafra? Two years ago, he was in court defending himself for "distribution of harmful matter to minors," because he included a poster dubbed "Penis Landscape" in Franken-christ, an album by his group The Dead Kennedys. Although he was cleared, Biafra fought a nasty legal battle with little support from the public, the music industry or other musicians. We should have paid more attention, because now the shit is really hitting the fan.

Anyone who's picked up a newspaper knows that freedom of expression is coming increasingly under fire in the United States. The controversy over funding for the National Endowment for the Arts, the arrest of members of 2 Live Crew for obscenity, San Francisco photographer Jock Sturges's persecution for taking photos of naked children, the threat of a flag-burning amendment — the list goes on and on, and there are plenty of other cases that just aren't getting any publicity.

There have been a lot of ups and downs for freedom of expression in the course of U.S. history, but in the last 20 years, the American public has generally been in favor of fewer restrictions. Now, however, the religious right has become much more organized and seems to have polished its tactics; instead of attacking expression outright, it commonly cloaks its real agenda behind a purported concern about child abuse and the exploitation of women. These concerns may be very real, but it boils down to an attempt to impose "traditional" — i.e. fundamentalist Christian — values on the rest of society. The most immediate victims of this are gays and lesbians, feminists and people of color, but they'll get around to everyone else sooner or later.

It's doubtful that most Americans really want Christian fundamentalists deciding what gets funded and what gets busted, what we can read and what we can listen to, but the debate is currently so fragmented that that question rarely comes up. "The groups attacking music labeling and the NEA are the same ones across the board that are going after school textbooks — ones like Phyllis Schlafly's Eagle Forum and many others," claims Michael Hudson, vice president of People for the American Way, a group that has been defending school textbooks for the last ten years. "There is absolutely an organized agenda in all these attacks against freedom of expression."

Unfortunately, many moderate and liberal politicians have either jumped on the censorship bandwagon or avoided taking a strong stand on the issue. Until now there has been no popular groundswell in favor of freedom of expression, and politicians rarely do anything unless they know they'll lose votes if they don't. People who want to defend freedom of expression need to become just as organized as the fundamentalists.

That's what the San Francisco/Bay Area Coalition for Freedom of Expression is attempting to do, in the Festival for Freedom of Expression taking place in San Francisco June 22nd through July 4th (see sidebar on this page.) Because of the importance of the Festival and the issues concerned, we decided to take a look at the current status of censorship attempts in various areas in the arts: Below are articles by Derk Richardson on music labeling, Heather Mackey on the NEA funding controversy, Steve Warren on attempts to change the movie rating system and myself on threats to writers and the publishing industry.

Despite the efforts of groups like People for the American Way and the ACLU, the fundamentalists have been pretty successful at setting the agenda for this debate; now we have to make sure our voices are heard, by agitating for liberal politicians to take a stand, by inundating Congress with letters, telegrams and phone calls, by continuing to create and present art that challenges the rigid world view of the Jesse Helmses and the Tipper Gores.

Here's one quick way to start: People for the American Way has set up a toll-free number that allows you to send a telegram to your congressperson, senators or all three and have it charged to your phone bill. Dial 1-800-257-4900 and ask for operator 9681; tell the operator who to send the telegram(s) to, and you'll be charged $6.25 each.

— Eileen Ecklund

AUTO, 1981

The late Robert Mapplethorpe's photos set off a nationwide controversy over public funding for art.

It has become painfully clear during recent months that the upshot of NEA reauthorization is not about a few homoerotic images, it's about setting the cultural agenda for the United States.

A Cultural Civil War

By Heather Mackey

LAST WEEK, hundreds of visual arts organizations across the country were taking what has become a necessary step for achieving any kind of art-world recognition — applying for a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

But even as they were trying to make the June 15th application deadline, the NEA reauthorization battle was heating up in Washington, where some legislators are working to ensure that if the endowment survives, it will be constrained by language that severely restricts the content of the works funded.

It has become painfully clear during recent months that the upshot of NEA reauthorization is not about a few homoerotic images or a performance artist smearing her body with chocolate, it's about setting the cultural agenda for the United States. And it appears that for the moment, the conservatives are winning.

After 25 years and roughly 85,000 grants to artists and artspace all over the country, the NEA has become the premier supporter of the arts in the U.S. The NEA's $171 million budget goes to support everything from neighborhood performance spaces to metropolitan arts museums, and the prestige and credibility an NEA grant confers can be ultimately more valuable than the money itself.

Conservatives like Jesse Helms, however, are convinced that "mistakes" like the controversial photographer Robert Mapplethorpe or feminist performance artist Karen Finley prove the NEA incapable of making responsible funding decisions.

"The chilling effect is happening all over the country, and not just in the arts," remarked Charlotte Murphy, a founding member of the National Campaign for Freedom of Expression. "It's an attack on freedom of expression, and the far right chooses the most vulnerable spots to start with."

President George Bush, who until recently supported full reauthorization without restrictive language, reversed his position in an announcement June 12th that NEA subsidies of "obscene" art must stop.

"The NEA is going to be reformed and that's a bottom line," Stephen Ward, an aide to Congressman Paul Henry (R-Michigan) who is on the NEA reauthorization committee, told the Bay Guardian.

On June 13th, Henry released a proposal that would require that any project funded by NEA "demonstrates a commitment to artistic excellence which is sensitive to the nature of public sponsorship, and does not deliberately denigrate the cultural heritage of the United States..." In addition, grants awarded must not "violate prevailing standards of obscenity or indecency."

What's disturbing to arts activists is not just that the Henry proposal's vague language seems to invite further compromise, but that it might be the only viable alternative to an even more restrictive proposal offered by Congressman Dana Rohrabacher, a conservative Orange County Republican.

"The only other language offer is the Rohrabacher language," Ward said, adding that unless Congress can agree on reform language "it will be Rohrabacher or no NEA at all."

One of the biggest questions, however, during this whole touch-and-go summer, is sure to be what went wrong.

FIRST AMENDMENT FESTIVAL

THE SAN Francisco Bay Area Coalition for Freedom of Expression has taken up the gauntlet dropped by Jesse Helms. Only three months old and with a support list of more than 200 local organizations, the Coalition's goal is to preserve the right of free expression as guaranteed by the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. Specifically, this means fighting current efforts to impose restrictions on projects funded by the National Endowment for the Arts.

A loose-knit group of individuals and organizations, the Coalition formed in March as an indirect response to the furor last year over the Mapplethorpe and Serrano exhibits. More recent events closer to home convinced those involved with the Coalition's founding of the need for immediate action. Steering committee member and Southern Exposure Gallery curator Jon Winet cites "McCarthyite" attacks by people like Rep. Dana Rohrabacher on Southern Exposure's "Modern Primitives" exhibit last fall as a local example of Helmsian small-mindedness.

The Coalition this weekend begins its Festival for Freedom of Expression, running June 22nd-July 4th. Participation comes from all corners of the Bay Area art world, from The Paradise Lounge to the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco, a good indicator that support crosses the superficial boundaries between "high" art and popular culture. Support from local politicians is also strong; Mayor Agnos has even declared Friday, June 22nd Freedom of Expression Day.

The festival kicks off that same day with a national press conference at noon at The Palace of the Legion of Honor (Lincoln Park, SF), which features speeches by local supporters and artists. There is also a ceremonial shrouding of Rodin's Thinker from noon to 1 pm every day of the festival.

Event highlights include a fund-raising reception for Harvey Gantt, democratic challenger to Jesse Helms, Thurs/21 at 5 pm at the Great American Music Hall, with speakers and music (655-5226); a two-day symposium entitled "Culture Under Fire," Fri/22-Sat/23 at the SF Art Institute (771-7020); a screening of previously censored films Sat/30 at 2 pm at the Exploratorium (561-0315); a talk by Dennis Barrie, director of the Contemporary Arts Center in Cincinnati, Mon/2 at 8 pm at the Cowell Theatre (995-ARTS); and "Word Attack: A Town Meeting and Reception Against Censorship," Tues/3 at the Hatley Martin Gallery (654-2181). Several benefits for the Coalition itself are also being staged — see page 37.

Festival schedules have been distributed to galleries, cafes, night spots and other key Bay Area gathering places. Additional events may also crop up, so keep your eyes on your usual sources for details. Information on the coalition and the issues at hand, letter-writing materials and a donation box will be available at each event, and Coalition members hope event-goers will at least sign a form letter to their senator or representative. There's no central phone number, but you can contact the Coalition at 1805 Divisadero, SF 94115.

Book-Bashing on the Rise

By Eileen Ecklund

YOU WON'T see much about book-burning in the news these days; it just isn't as popular as arresting flag-burners and black rap musicians or cutting funding for "degenerate" art. After all, burning books (though it still happens) conjures up a lot of nasty images, and the folks who claim only to be protecting our children or supporting traditional values have evidently decided that book-burning is lousy PR.

This doesn't mean, however, that books aren't facing some serious censorship attempts on various fronts. The most obvious area is children's books; textbooks have been a battleground for many years, but the number of attacks against them are increasing all the time.

"For ten years, we've been opposing extreme right attacks on textbooks," says Michael Hudson, vice president of People for the American Way. "There's been a dramatic increase since we've been doing it, particularly in California."

The reason for the increase, Hudson says, is that the lobbying groups of the religious right — like the National Association of Christian Educators, based in Costa Mesa, California, and Phyllis Schlafly's Eagle Forum — are "much larger and more organized now than ever before on the grassroots level. Because of this, they're having a lot more success now than they were a few years ago."

And their selection of reading material is quite eclectic, Hudson says. "They've gone after [the popular reading series] Impressions, evolution, sex education — you name it, they've attacked it. Their real effort has been to indoctrinate kids through their textbooks."

But the fight isn't just over textbooks: Increasingly there are attempts to rewrite children's books to reflect a politically correct, socially acceptable world view — or remove those that don't. This year, copies of Little Red Riding Hood were removed from schools in Empire, California because Red takes her grandma a bottle of wine along with the other goodies in the basket. Parents in Laytonville, in Mendocino County, attempted to have Dr. Seuss's The Lorax removed from the shelves last fall because it said negative things about logging. On certain occasions, unfortunately, progressive people have been just as guilty of this type of behavior as the right-wingers — like the many attempts to take Huckleberry Finn off the shelves because of its alleged racism.

Booksellers have been on the firing line as well as school districts and libraries, and not just in terms of children's books. Recently, the American Booksellers Association formed the ABA Foundation for Freedom of Expression to represent booksellers on these issues and educate the public.

According to Oren Teicher, president of the Foundation, the group hopes to be a source of information for booksellers about First Amendment rights and obligations, and to promote freedom of expression in general. "We intend to become a national voice on issues related to this debate," Teicher says.

According to Teicher, the Foundation grew out of "dozens and dozens" of incidents over the last few years wherein booksellers have been asked to remove books from their shelves. "What seems to have happened in the '80s," he says, "is that, rather than argue about the substance of a book, the tendency is to try to remove it from view. Our role in society is to make material available so that people can decide for themselves."

Although Teicher says that attacks against booksellers have come from all fronts — feminists and minorities as well as religious fundamentalists — he points to the Edwin Meese's Justice Department under the Reagan Administration as a catalyst for many of the recent attacks. "The Meese Justice Department encouraged this atmosphere," he says. "The Meese [Commission] Report [on Pornography] said a lot of this stuff is legal — so go out and protest and try to get it out of circulation [that way]."

Attacking books once they're on the shelves is one way to go about suppressing them; another is to put pressure on writers and publishers. The proposed restrictions on NEA funding are liable to have a big effect here as well as in other areas of the arts (see the article on page 19 for more complete discussion of the NEA controversy). Although most of the discussion around the NEA has focused on the Mapplethorpe exhibition, the loss of NEA funds would also affect a lot of talented writers and the small presses and literary magazines that publish them.

'Any serious literary magazine that intends to keep on publishing applies to the NEA. There aren't many other consistent sources of funding.'

NEA funds go to important local literary groups like San Francisco's Small Press Traffic, a center that offers workshops, reading series and special events as well as showcasing poetry and other writings published by small presses. Berkeley's Small Press Distribution, a wholesaler specializing in literary works from independent small presses, has received NEA grants for more than a decade. These groups provide a service to the literary community and the reading public that simply isn't offered by more mainstream, commercial concerns. "We distribute poetry, fiction, literary reviews and literature in translation — the sorts of things that aren't really commercially viable," says Lisa Domitrovich, Small Press Distribution's director.

Also on the NEA funding list are respected literary journals like San Francisco's Five Fingers Review and ZYZZYVA, which has published photos by Jock Sturges, who is now under investigation for "child pornography." Several Bay Area writers have also received grants within the last year, and San Francisco's excellent Poets in the Schools gets money from a program funded by the NEA.

"Any serious literary magazine that intends to keep on publishing applies to the NEA," says Katherine Harer, director of Small Press Traffic. "There aren't many other consistent sources of funding."

Even though the amount of money involved in an NEA grant is usually not very large, many writers' and small publishers depend on the grants as "seed money," Harer explains. An NEA grant is a source of credibility for these artists and organizations; once they have that on their resume, money from other sources follows.

"Small independent [publishers] are the vanguard," of the literary world, says Harer, adding that, if funding restrictions are imposed, "it will have a big effect on literature. People will still be writing, but where will you read it?" ■

What happened to the support that the arts used to enjoy?

"The world sort of changed overnight," said Murphy, who is also involved with the National Association of Artists Organizations, a group that formed after the Corcoran Gallery in Washington canceled the Robert Mapplethorpe exhibition last June. "Up until now it's been a... system where you go to Congress with a feeling of good attitude about the arts and they support you. That's just not going to work anymore."

Neither is looking for a guardian angel on Capitol Hill. Although Congressman Pat Williams of Montana has been outspoken in his support for an unrestricted NEA, he has more often than not stood alone. With NEA supporters in Congress afraid to risk their necks for the endowment, the focus of groups like People for the American Way and the National Campaign for Freedom of Expression has shifted to grassroots organizing, public education, letter-writing campaigns and increasing the number of First Amendment supporters elected to office.

According to Beth Tuttle, vice president and director of communications for People for the American Way, "The July 4th recess is a key time to target local congresspeople when they come home from Washington." In addition, People for the American Way is sponsoring a national series of radio and print ads in favor of free expression and the NEA.

Although the reauthorization hearings won't take place until mid-July, many artists have already felt the chill. The decision on grants to 15 performance artists, the controversial Karen Finley among them, has been deferred until August. In an unprecedented situation, the NEA has required that the Kitchen, a well-known performance space in New York, notify the endowment of the nature of each performance in advance.

The latest tactic in what Tuttle calls "a cultural civil war" is the harassment of galleries, artists or museums that have attracted the ire of the far right. The Franklin Furnace, an experimental art space, was temporarily closed by the New York fire department after the opening of a Karen Finley installation. Apparently, an audience member called the authorities after getting into an argument with Furnace staff members during the performance.

The Cincinnati Vice Squad and Sheriff's Department didn't wait to be called; they were there the night the Mapplethorpe exhibit opened. In the Bay Area, the FBI ransacked Jock Sturges' studio after notification from a photo processing lab (see sidebar on this page).

But there are signs that artists are beginning to fight back. The Lewipsky Dance Company in Los Angeles and the New School of Social Research in New York have both filed lawsuits claiming that the language of the Helms amendment (adopted last September) puts unconstitutional restrictions on their freedom of expression. New York theater producer Joseph Papp and the Shakespeare Festival in Ashland, Oregon, have turned down their NEA grants rather than sign the Helms anti-obscenity oath.

Anne Meisner, of the San Francisco Arts Commission Gallery, said she knows of artists who have accepted the grants, but have written a cover letter over the oath stating their opposition to the restrictions. Speaking for the Arts Commission Gallery, itself no stranger to controversial exhibits, Meisner said that if it came to signing an anti-obscenity oath, "I think we would join with Joseph Papp and [the Lewipsky Dance Company] and I think we would refuse." ■

The Snapshot Police

THE FBI is asking local photo labs to scrutinize their customers' pictures and report any evidence of "child pornography" — including almost any pictures that show naked children — the Bay Guardian has learned.

The San Francisco FBI office sent a letter to Bay Area labs last week warning photo processors that they are required to abide by federal and state laws "prohibiting the sexual exploitation of children."

"Because child molesters frequently photograph their victims, film processing labs are our first line of defense," the June 13th letter, signed by Supervisory Special Agent Susan F. Schnitzer, states. "Film processing labs are required by state law to report suspected child pornography discovered during processing."

The letter, a copy of which was obtained by the Bay Guardian, invites lab representatives to a private, closed-door meeting June 25th with FBI officials to discuss the child pornography laws and the role labs can play in helping enforce them.

Civil liberties lawyers and some photo processors say the letter amounts to FBI intimidation of people engaged in a legitimate business and raises important questions about privacy rights. The letter also suggests that federal law enforcement officials are getting involved in an area that appears to be largely a matter of state law.

The FBI letter is the latest development in a controversy that began with the seizure and confiscation of photographic materials belonging to Bay Area photographer Jock Sturges. San Francisco police and FBI agents raided Sturges' home several weeks ago after receiving a call from a local film-processing lab that was asked to develop a roll of the photographer's film that included shots of nude children.

Sturges and his supporters insist that the pictures are art, not pornography, and that the FBI raid was part of an ongoing right-wing effort to censor controversial artistic material.

The FBI letter assures photo-processing labs that they "are not under any obligation to become experts in what is or is not deemed child pornography." However, experts say, the definition of "pornography" is so broad that almost any picture of a naked child could be considered pornographic. And the FBI is asking the labs to interpret the law broadly.

Schnitzer told the Bay Guardian, "We don't want photos of babies in cribs. But a nude frontal shot of a ten-to-12-year-old boy is something we might consider pornographic. If someone errs on the side of caution, that's better than not doing anything at all."

Ed Chen, an ACLU lawyer, said the FBI's request infringes on civil liberties. "It's not just a matter of reporting something that's already unlawful, but asking these people to report anything they have any questions about," Chen told the Bay Guardian.

Several San Francisco photo processors said they were intimidated by the FBI's approach, and voiced reluctance to "rat" on customers whose photos include nude children.

Thomas Gara, president and owner of L'Image, said he is "wary of a McCarthyist attitude about art and the body." Ben Nichols, manager of Picturesque, said, "We often process photos of dancers wearing tights. Some of the dancers are very young and sometimes you can't tell if they're wearing clothes or not. I don't have a problem with processing those photos, but I wonder if that could get me into trouble."

Some are also questioning the FBI's involvement in what appears to be a state and local matter. Schnitzer said the agency formed a task force last year bringing together federal, state and local officials to combat child porn. "The FBI is involved because it is concerned about photos being transported across state lines," she said.

But Gara said that most of his customers are local. "Only about 25 percent of our processing is of photos that were taken out of state," he explained. "And that is mainly by customers who were on vacation."

Peter Cling, an Assistant District Attorney with the San Francisco District Attorney's Office, said he was not aware of the joint task force. However, he said he "did not find it all that unusual that the FBI is operating under the assumption that pornographic material is being transported across state lines."

Scared by Music

By Derk Richardson

GREAT MUSIC can scare the wits out of you. I remember the exquisite terror of listening for the first time to Bob Dylan's Highway 61 Revisited, John Lennon's Plastic Ono Band, James Brown, Charlie Parker, John Coltrane or the Gang of Four. The hair rose on the back of my neck, my stomach grew taut and hollow. Sometimes I broke into a cold, shivering sweat, not because of anything specific the musicians were saying, but because of the way they said it. The feelings — theirs and mine — seemed to come from some pure, deep source behind doors that we don't ordinarily open in daily life. And if you entered without reservation, and allowed yourself to let the fear run its course, to be the fear, you could come out on the other side, perhaps with some new understanding of the world or yourself.

The legislators, judges, sheriffs and paranoid parents who would label the jacket of every recording, and lock up 2 Live Crew (as well as any merchant who sells Nasty As They Wanna Be), aren't afraid of music; they're obsessed with symbols. Their focus on graphic language and violent images disguises more profound anxieties they'd rather not confront directly. Just as the flag fetish conveniently deflects doubts about the nation being as grand as Old Glory, the clampdown on obscene rap and rock is more than a knee-jerk reaction to dirty verbs and foul nouns. It cannot be considered apart from what Public Enemy has succinctly dubbed Fear of a Black Planet.

Granted, in the case of 2 Live Crew we're not talking about great art, good music or even interesting rap. But we're living in a climate that excludes or trivializes that level of debate. Cowardly politicians and corporate collaborators manipulate fears — of homosexuality, eco-disaster, female power, teen suicide, social breakdown, inner-city rebellion and skin pigmentation — in order to consolidate power. We don't need to contain communism abroad anymore, so let's contain the menace at home, by branding photographers as pornographers, activists as bomb-throwing anarchists, abortionists as murderers, rap musicians as thugs. Stick the criminals in jail, censor the artists, put warning labels on recordings and hope it all goes away.

But the bigots won't let it go away, even if their efforts backfire. Last week, according to rock critic Dave Marsh, who edits the invaluable monthly newsletter Rock & Roll Confidential, Florida police were threatening to arrest anyone who played the banned 2 Live Crew album in public. If that happens, Marsh proposes a massive boom-box civil disobedience rally. Marsh and his co-editors have long combated record labeling and censorship — the July edition of RRC will be devoted entirely to the issue — and have compiled an important and useful pamphlet, You've Got A Right To Rock. And the current 2 Live Crew controversy, ugly sexist rants and all, may at least help people face up to the issues behind the censorship crusade.

One heartening development is the founding of Parents for Rock and Rap, a watchdog organization started by a 66-year-old mother in, yes, Libertyville, Illinois. Mary Morello, who taught school for 22 years and has a son in a rock band called Lock Up, was inspired to leap into the fray well before the Nasty As They Wanna Be flap. "I wanted to contest what the PMRC [Parents Music Resource Center] and other organizations like that stood for," Morello said in a phone conversation last week. "I've run into them at PTA meetings here in my village and have defended music artists' right to be free under the First Amendment."

Morello got started during a trip to Los Angeles, when her son, Tom, and Rock & Roll Confidential's Lee Balingier passed on "reams" of material on censorship. She took that and an RRC mailing list home to Illinois and sent out 350 letters soliciting support (and three bucks to help pay for printing, stamps and phone bills).

"I believe that parents should be responsible for their children," Morello explained, "not the government and not labels on albums. It's amazing, but almost to a person, people on my block agree with me."

She is also a defender of 2 Live Crew's "right to have their lyrics and people's right to buy them. I saw Luther Campbell on national TV," she said, "and he's a good parent. I would like him if I knew him, I'm sure. I bought the tape and it's not anything I'm going to listen to again, and I can understand the mothers of America hearing that record and going, 'Oh gosh, the language!' But when five deputies have to come in to arrest one man in a record store who insists on selling the album, it's like living in a totalitarian state. Doesn't anybody recognize that?"

"I don't use the words that 2 Live Crew uses," Morello continued, "and I don't listen to jokes that are a little bit smutty, nor do I tell them — that's just myself. But I like lots of rock music. I don't know that much about rap, so I'm going to have to find a rap station on my radio. Some parents want their kids to have such canned music... oh dear."

Morello doesn't want to be a leader, although she has already been interviewed on a Detroit radio talk show and by United Press and USA Today. "I'm just aspiring to be another voice in this," she explained, "and to band people together so we can write letters and make phone calls and try to keep artists and the music industry free."

So far, she said, the response has been encouraging. She's received more than 60 positive letters, a neighbor is lending his word processor and printer, a lawyer in the next town is offering free help and volunteers are cropping up to run affiliates all over the country. "I've had calls from everywhere," Morello laughed. "They think I'm an authority on this."

The important thing is not expertise but Morello's fearless stance. Several battles have already been lost. The music industry, as represented by the RIAA (Recording Industry Association of America), has capitulated on the issue of labeling by "volunteering" to sticker "offensive" product. Ostensibly to fend off mandatory labeling bills under consideration in 18 state legislatures, the move is exactly what the PMRC was after. According to RRC, more than 1,000 stores already refuse to stock labeled records or sell them only to adults. And you can count on the censors to call for even more rigorous policing.

In addition to the legal battles being waged on behalf of the First Amendment, grassroots resistance is essential. Protect your right to be scared by music by sending $3 for a copy of You've Got A Right To Rock (available from RRC, Box 15052, Long Beach, CA 90815) and by contacting Parents for Rock and Rap, PO Box 53, Libertyville, IL 60048. ■

WHAT THE FUSS IS ALL ABOUT

Every major news agency across the country has picked up on the story of the recent arrests of rap artists 2 Live Crew, and talked a lot about the content of the songs, but they've all gone to great lengths to avoid actually quoting the lyrics. The members of 2 Live Crew may not be great artists, and their lyrics may indeed be offensive, but good art has always been a subjective matter. The band's album As Nasty As They Wanna Be shouldn't be banned any more than Henry Miller's Tropic of Cancer or William Burroughs's Naked Lunch should have been 20 years ago. To give our readers an opportunity to see the actual evidence, we're printing some of 2 Live Crew's lyrics, selected from the song "Dick Almighty." Is it offensive? Is it art? That's up to you — and isn't that the whole point?

"That dick will make a bitch cry, when fucking a bitch that's tight inside/That dick has got a spell on you, once it gets inside you will act a fool/That dick will make a bitch act cute, suck my dick bitch and make it puke/Jump up on it, grab it like you want it, if you could wear a dick bitch you would flaunt it... It's 15 inches long, eight inches thick, last name Almighty, first name is Dick."

Love and lust behind bars: Leonard Nimoy, Michael Forest and Paul Mazursky in Deathwatch, showing Friday at the Castro.

OUT ON FILM

While a number of films showing in the second week of the Gay and Lesbian Film Festival are general entertainment, several focus on the AIDS epidemic

By Steve Warren

AIDS TAKES the spotlight for the closing weekend of the 14th San Francisco International Lesbian and Gay Film Festival. While most of the shows at the Castro Theatre tend toward more general entertainment, a number of programs at the Roxie Cinema are related to the epidemic — all the more ironic because Robert Evans, a partner in the Roxie for more than a decade, died of AIDS-related causes on June 9th.

From Greta Garbo's lesbian past to the future of the lesbian and gay communities, the festival has a lot more ground to cover. As often happens at festivals, much of the best material comes from British television. The BBC miniseries Oranges Are Not the Only Fruit is the best film in this festival, after being among the best in the San Francisco International Film Festival last month, and Channel Four's Out on Tuesday, which gives the festival five programs (including Comrades in Arms, which shows separately), remains an excellent example of how to produce a magazine show.

Advance tickets are still on sale at Captain Video on Market near Castro in San Francisco, with remaining tickets at the respective theaters on performance days. To find out what's still available, call 431-9227.

Six or seven programs are repeats, and we'll refer you to last week's Bay Guardian for those reviews. Here's a rundown on the rest of the festival. Reviews are by Steve Warren unless otherwise noted.

Two Oscars (The Times of Harvey Milk, Common Threads: Stories from the Quilt) are a thrill, but so is being recognized in your own city by your own community, so Robert Epstein should be jubilant tonight as he receives the festival's award given annually for "outstanding contributions to lesbian and gay media arts." Clips from a number of his works will be shown.

FILMS AND VIDEOS — Roxie Cinema

6:30 pm: Art for Boys and Girls

As they say, I don't know about Art, but I know what I like, and I only felt affection for two of these five short films, most of which deal with troubled relationships of gay or lesbian couples, or between a lesbian and her mother, in one case. Grapefruit is a romp, an all-lesbian version of the story of John Lennon and Yoko Ono. It has the slapdash style of the early Beatles, but lacks their wit. Most of the famous events are covered, including the "Two Virgins" picture, recreated with two women. Best on the bill is Merida Proscrita, a gritty portrait of a Mexican youth struggling with his homosexual feelings in the context of his larger struggle against poverty.

8:30 pm: Out on Tuesday, Program One

Hons, Right?" looks at Britain's right wing, which includes a surprising number of gays — some, like the Conservative Group for Homosexual Equality, working for change within the system. Current issues are discussed, and someone describes the prime minister as more liberal than usually pictured: "Mrs. Thatcher's views on sex are much more tolerant privately than they are publicly." She is not aligned with the religious right, and was in favor of decriminalizing homosexuality in 1967, we are told. "Walk on Bi" questions whether bisexuals really enjoy the best of both worlds or are just afraid to make a commitment. Rocker Tom Robinson defines himself as "a gay man who happens to live with a woman." Other segments deal with Amnesty International's non-stand on gay rights, losing lovers to AIDS, opera queens, lesbian yuppies and a magazine that offers camp for the bourgeois.

10:30 pm: The World Is Sick (sic) and The Pink Pimpernel

Toronto's John Greyson, whose Urinal was a highlight of last year's festival, turned his camera on activists at last year's International AIDS Conference in Montreal and came away with two films, the first as straight a documentary as Greyson is capable of (Prime Minister Mulroney's nose grows as he boasts of his administration's record on AIDS), and the second a gay version of The Scarlet Pimpernel, with documentary inserts and safe-sex versions of classic gay films. AIDS isn't funny, but Greyson has the ability to go into laugh-or-cry situations and make the right choice as he combines entertainment and information with wit and creativity.

ing with the six-year-old "heathens" of the elementary-school playground, when her mother mistakes her serious flu for a special message from God.

So Jess's innocent adolescent girl-to-girl love affair is the perfect antidote for the blues; that is, until she's bound, gagged and forced to repent by the Pentecostal community that claims to be her family. Jess's admission ticket to Oxford marks her victory in the battle to escape the confines of the Pentecostals, and eventually she winds up living in Lancashire, Scotland, where she is an outspoken lesbian.

In the film, Jess grows from a redhead with big brown eyes asking the ice cream truck driver what "fornicating" means to a modern-day lesbian hero attracting single young girls at every turn. As with all good heroes, she doesn't repent her "sins," but continues her escape from narrow-mindedness with bold, adolescent fury, spurred on and supported by older single women of the community.

The few trite touches (every girl that utters the phrase, "I don't like cooking and cleaning" seems to become a lesbian within five minutes) only balance the completely fresh version of lesbian coming-out. It's surprising, but no film with this much power has hit the cinemas before — the genuineness of the relationship between Jess and Melanie, the Roman Catholic convert who is her lover, develops without the forced role-playing that plagues most lesbian love stories.

This film is a beautifully adapted screenplay of Jeanette Winterson's novel by the same title, with charming young actors giving painfully, laughably honest portrayals of childhood, love and the naivety of youth. It will surely win your hearts and strengthen your struggle.

7 pm: Extramuros

Similar in some respects to Manuel y Clemente, which showed in a previous festival but was also made in Spain in 1985, this is like a serious version of Almodovar's Dark Habits, which was also about a struggling convent with Carmen Maura as one of the sisters. Here it's in a medieval context, and Maura's lover (Mercedes Sampietra in an inspired performance) gets the idea of saving the order by faking stigmata and turning the convent into an object of pilgrimage. The lesbian aspect isn't glossed over, but it's almost incidental to a plot that may be difficult for non-Catholics to understand. This is a well-realized piece of work.

9:30 pm: Deathwatch and Un Chant d'Amour

The latter film, a short made by Jean Genet himself, is a clearer, more concise and poetic vision of love and lust behind prison bars than the feature, adapted from a Genet play, which has been unjustly forgotten for 23 years. Vic Morrow's direction captures a consistent, if not very interesting, mood, and the editing seems ahead of its time in the way flashbacks are inserted. Leonard Nimoy and Michael Forest are the butch guys sharing a cell with nellie Paul Mazursky in this unromantic triangle that's hard to tear your eyes away from, even if it's not very good.

The most interesting of the series, if you want to know what's happening in Eastern Europe, this features "Sex 121 and the Gulag," about gay life in Russia (where the imminent repeal of Article 121 is expected to decriminalize homosexuality), and "Polskiseks," about gay life in Poland, which is difficult because of ties between Solidarity and the Catholic church. There are profiles of gay artist Allan de Souza and lesbian novelist Sarah Schulman. The latter says she based a character on Priscilla Presley because she's "the lesbian equivalent of a drag queen." Other segments explore the gay roots of punk and the influence of punk fashion on the post-punk era, and the networking that has people with AIDS better-informed than their doctors about alternative therapies.

10:30 pm: Fun for Boys and Girls

Here we go again: I don't know about Fun, but I know what I like... sometimes. Three of these eight shorts are too brief to dislike — Joystick Blues even made me chuckle — and a fourth, Is That All There Is...?, seems to turn up everywhere, so I'd be used to it even if I didn't like it. Of the remainder, I only hated Searanch: The True Story, which loses possibly explanatory dialogue in the sound mix, leaving just an unpleasant visual jumble. Alphabit Land: The Backyard Tour is campy, self-indulgent and often fun as "professional wannabe" John Canalli shows us and his cousin from Altoona around New York's Lower East Side. Lucy Winer's Tales of an Exhausted Woman tries to be whimsical but doesn't quite make it, especially with the possibility that the eponymous heroine is suffering from chronic fatigue syndrome instead of a fashionable laziness.

Six of these shorts suffer from being on the same program with Melinda Garey's The Obelisk, the best short in the festival. It's based on an E.M. The filmmaker/hero of Remembrance is working through the break-up of a four-year relationship (his extorts me he didn't really take the furniture) by listening to opera and watching All About Eve. The use of scenes from Eve has a random quality, when it might have been clever with more thought. Viva Eu! is a tribute to artist Wilton Braga, who died of AIDS. His friends may enjoy watching him flit around Barcelona in a dress, but there's nothing to involve strangers in the story. If you like to look at beautiful images of leather and cigarettes being lit and smoked, Walk the Dog is the film you've been waiting for. At least it's short. Art or porn? Tie Me Up! Tie Me Down! got an X rating.

THE SCARLET LETTER

By Steve Warren

THE PEOPLE calling for changes in the movie rating system don't realize what they're asking for. I can't believe Roger Ebert, who's been pushing his proposal to install an A-for-Adult between R and X for more than three years, hasn't thought it through any better than he has.

In these times when politicians are trying to impose censorship on the National Endowment for the Arts, Ebert and company are proposing to give the Motion Picture Association of America the power to judge artistic merit as well as moral suitability.

We're talking about the rating system that was established in the late '60s as a preferable alternative to the Production Code that had governed the industry for more than three decades, deleting all expletives and leaving no sinner unpunished in the final reel. Only a daring few stood up to the Code and released their films without its sanction.

The Free Speech Movement and the spirit it engendered changed the mood of the country in the Sixties, and an industry that had learned to talk 40 years earlier could no longer accept restrictions on what it said. To avoid government censorship, ratings were established to keep children from seeing anything too explicit and to guide parents in deciding what to allow their youngsters to see.

Three of the four ratings have been virtually the same from the beginning: G (General audiences), R (Restricted: Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian) and X (No one under 17 admitted). The fourth changed in the early years from M (Mature audiences) to GP (standing dyslexically for Parental Guidance) and finally PG (Parental Guidance suggested: Some material may not be suitable for children), and was subdivided a few years ago to introduce PG-13 (Parents strongly cautioned: Some material may be inappropriate for children under 13).

Now many of us see that as pretty silly, but definitely better than outright censorship.

The MPAA holds copyrights on all but the X rating, so they can only be used in conjunction with films that have gone through the official procedure of being rated by a panel of nine parents with no connection to the motion picture industry. Variety, the show-business trade paper, recently quoted Richard Heffner, chair of the MPAA Classification and Rating Administration, as saying the X wasn't copyrighted "in order to spare the board from having to watch violence or sex films which had no chance of garnering an R."

The X rating immediately became associated in the public mind with pornography, even though it was attached to such great films as Midnight Cowboy and A Clockwork Orange in their initial release. Probably the first to protest the X was Melvin Van Peebles, whose Sweetback's Baadasssss Song was so rated in 1971. He argued that because of cultural differences, films for black audiences should be judged by different criteria. The MPAA was not about to open that can of worms.

The real pornographers soon began labeling their work XXX, which should be enough to distinguish it from what the Eberts of the world would call A-for-Adult films, but other problems developed. Newspapers and television stations in some cities announced they would not carry advertising for X-rated films, and some municipalities began prosecuting theater owners for admitting minors to movies rated X. The combination led most, if not all, major studios to adopt a policy of not releasing films with an X rating, because their income potential was curtailed. I think Last Tango in Paris, which United Artists released in 1973, was the last film to escape without either being recut or sent to the minors.

In the early days of the system, the head of MGM, James Aubrey Jr. — the least creative person ever to run a major studio — decreed that, to maximize box-office potential, almost none of the studio's films would go out with ratings stronger than PG. The result was artistic disaster, as films were re-edited without regard for continuity or coherence to secure the desired rating.

Re-cutting is often a guessing game, as the rating board won't explain why it gives a rating. Several films, most recently Leatherface: The Texas Chainsaw Massacre III and Wild Orchid, have been butchered to assure a less restrictive rating. Sometimes, as in the cases of Crimes of Passion and Nine ½ Weeks, the cut footage is restored for video release. If the original director is given adequate time to prepare a new cut, a coherent film can still be salvaged, as with Scarface, Fast Times at Ridgemont High and RoboCop.

The alternative is releasing the film without a rating, which some independent distributors don't mind doing. It may leave them prey to the same advertising restrictions, but it avoids the stigma of an X. Recent examples are Henry: Portrait of a Serial Killer, The Cook, the Thief, His Wife and Her Lover and Tie Me Up! Tie Me Down!. All three were submitted for ratings and given X's, which their distributors rejected.

Miramax Pictures, which released the last two, has gone to court against the MPAA with director Pedro Almodovar over the Tie Me Up! rating, claiming the board is prejudiced against foreign-language films and independent distributors. Look for things to get hot again in August when David Lynch's Wild at Heart is scheduled for U.S. release. Reports from the Cannes festival, where it won the grand prize, said it was sure to get an X in its original form, and Lynch is contractually bound to deliver an R-rated film to the American distributor, the Samuel Goldwyn Company. Before this is over we may learn that One-Eyed Jack's was named for MPAA president Jack Valenti, and he killed Laura Palmer.

If the Ebert A were instituted, the same board of nine parents who know nothing about movies but know what their kids should see — or perhaps a different board, depending on how the MPAA decided to implement the plan — would, once having decided the films named above were not suitable for viewing by those under 17, then set about deciding which were art and which were pornography.

It's easy with Midnight Cowboy, Clockwork Orange and The Cook, the Thief, for instance; there's little doubt that these are fine films. But what about failed attempts at art? Leatherface is shit, but it's not porn. Tie Me Up! isn't very good, but the most artistic scene in it is probably the one that got it the X rating in the first place. Should Wild Orchid be branded pornography because Zalman King isn't as good a director as The Cook, the Thief's Peter Greenaway? If someone made a film of the Robert Mapplethorpe exhibit, would that be rated A or X? Or would it depend on the filmmaker's skill?

The courts have had problems over the years in distinguishing between art and pornography. I once testified in a pornography trial in New Orleans that was right out of Monty Python. Perhaps no one is truly qualified to judge the difference, but instituting an A rating would assuredly give that power to a group of people who are not qualified.

What needs to change is not the system itself but the public's perception of it. No, that's not quite true; most people know the difference between an X-rated mainstream film and outright porn. They can tell by the theater it's showing in, for one thing, and by the fact it has one X, not three.

So what needs to change is the corporate perception of the public perception of the X rating. The media should not reject advertising for legitimate adult films, rated or not, so the studios needn't be afraid to release them. An X should mean, as it was intended to, that a film isn't suitable for minors to see. Period. Whether it's good or bad is a matter for critics, and ultimately the public, to decide.

SOULFUL SEX

Georg Feuerstein's collection of essays on sex and spirituality are heavy on the preaching, light on the fun

ENLIGHTENED SEXUALITY: ESSAYS ON BODY-POSITIVE SPIRITUALITY. Edited by Georg Feuerstein. The Crossing Press, 288 pages, $12.95.

By Marcy Sheiner

CONSIDERING THE sex-phobic attitudes of our Judeo-Christian heritage, we could all use a little "body-positive spirituality." Enlightened Sexuality is a collection of essays by religious and spiritual thinkers on the connection between sex and the search for God, higher consciousness or unity with the cosmos.

Dialogue about both sex and spirituality has fascinated the human race since time immemorial, probably because, in the words of one of the essayists, "each responds to the most profound longing in human nature... the hunger for unification, for surrender, to something greater than ourselves..." Thus, a book addressing the connection between the two spheres is, by its very nature, provocative.

Precisely because the subject is so charged with significance, it has the potential to agitate. I know that for myself, certain concepts and buzzwords on the subject of sex — particularly edicts about what sex "should" be — instantly arouse my wrath. Thus, reading through the 20 essays in this book, which vary widely and sometimes contradict one another, was like walking through a minefield. I would find myself in agreement with the ideas expressed in one essay, only to become apoplectic at the next.

The good news, as George Feuerstein says in his preface, is that "Sex is not incompatible with spiritual life." The bad news is that most of these essayists view "just sex" as an activity engaged in by unevolved animals. If you think the devaluation of sex without love is constricting, try this on for size: Even with a lifelong mate, sex only has meaning when "dedicated to higher values." One essayist goes so far as to say that "sexuality, in itself... is entirely destructive."

Contrary to Feuerstein's alleged purpose of creating a new consciousness about sexuality, this is an old twist on an old theme, not terribly different from the religious dogma that outlaws birth control and masturbation. The most telling parallel is that several of the authors, particularly those promoting the Eastern philosophy of tantric yoga, stress the belief that orgasm represents a loss of energy: "Ejaculation especially weakens a male's nerves and prostate, and lowers his digestive power and immune strength." There is absolutely no physiological basis for this outmoded theory — in fact, recent scientific discoveries have determined that during orgasm the body releases endorphins, which flood the organism with renewed energy and a sense of well-being.

Not all the essayists regard the spilling of seed as an activity to be avoided. The most thought-provoking essays are those that question and illuminate, like an interview with Sam Keen, a "maverick philosopher" and author. Keen offers the only moments of levity in the book, with bits of sharp analysis that inadvertently undermine some of the other essayists. "Theologies of gnosis," says Keen, "are always what I call whoring after the light. They want more light than we have."

Some of those who "whore after the light" deserve, in my mind, to be banished into darkness forever. Robert Svoboda, in a piece on tantric sex, tells us that "Good sex is much more important for a woman than for a man" because of "the pheromones which she inhales during intimate contact with a male." Therefore, it is "a man's responsibility to satisfy his woman, to direct her energy so that she can create or procreate. Whenever a man fails in his duty to his woman, her ability to create a happy home suffers, and life becomes hellish for them both." This philosophy was real sexy when expressed by Anthony Quinn in Zorba the Greek, but as a serious statement on sexual relations in 1990, it's downright pathetic.

One chapter offers personal testimonies from people who have experienced spiritual enlightenment as a result of practicing tantra and other sexual techniques. Although the tantric tradition is a venerable one that can offer much to those who choose to practice it, the stories in this collection are so mundane and boring as to render them unreadable. "We started making love, and it was such a feeling of depth... I felt very full, very warm, but not like warm outside a body, just warm through, and the air around me was warm and it wasn't so separate and got less and less separate as time went on." I don't think anyone's going to take up tantra based on these babblings.

Homosexuality is entirely invisible until the last section of the book, "Alternatives Within Erotic Spirituality." Then we get two essays, one an old-fashioned plea for tolerance by the church, the other an incongruous piece claiming lesbians as the ultimate mirror of God. Also absent is any voice from Jewish theologians — the frequent reassurances that I could remain a good Christian while rolling in the hay were less than reassuring.

The greatest weakness in Enlightened Sexuality is in fact its lack of light. Nowhere are sex or spirituality treated with the playfulness they deserve; everything is heavy-handed to the point of being pretentious and sleep-inducing. After several weighty essays, I chuckled with relief when I reached "Ovarian Kung Fu" — the phrase tickled my by-now-overburdened chakras. But the essay itself turned out to be as heavy-handed as the others, resting on the supposition that, "The Jing (principal) energy of woman provides her with life-force energy... contained to a large extent in the ovaries." Admittedly, this broke me up, but it was clearly not what the author intended.

Maybe it's just my perverse nature, but I tend to rebel against any sexual orientation that's touted as The Way. Thus, when confronted by proponents of sexual indulgence, I experience a profound yearning to retire to a nunnery. Conversely, Enlightened Sexuality almost sent me screaming for the nearest orgy, the gods and goddesses be damned. Balance, the yogis would caution, balance. I would have liked to see some balance in Enlightened Sexuality, in the form of a few words from truly body-positive experts: sex therapists and counselors, who Feuerstein dismisses as lacking "a deeper sensitivity to the authentic spiritual dimension of existence."

But it is the generally nonjudgmental approach of sex therapists that allows people to discover for themselves the spiritual dimension of their sexuality, whether or not it is labeled as such. Issuing sanctimonious dicta, as Enlightened Sexuality does, smacks of the same old moralistic judgments we've been getting for centuries. ■

MASON DIXON LINES

Bay Area author Fenton Johnson crafts a tale of conflict between North and South

CROSSING THE RIVER. By Fenton Johnson. Birch Lane Press, 224 pages, $15.95

By Micha X. Peled

THE SOUTH has been good to American literature, providing it with plenty of rich material and fine novelists. Many characteristics of the Southern novel — eccentric, intensely self-aware characters who are always looking backward, a sense of humor bordering on the grotesque, notions of loyalty and old-fashioned values clashing with a world that's moving forward — are present in Fenton Johnson's first novel, Crossing the River. The novel has a distinct Southern feel, even though it has the dividing line between South and North as its focus. It is appropriately set in Kentucky, where family members fought each other in the Civil War, and where both Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis were born.

But this is a contemporary story, and from the vantage point of California we could easily assume that the distinctions between North and South have long been blurred. For this novel to work, it must convince us that life is significantly different on each bank of the Knob Fork River, that "everybody knew the North ended and the South began at the bridge."

Fortunately, Johnson heeds a basic rule in writing fiction — stick to the subjects you know about. Choosing to focus on his native Kentucky, Johnson — now a Bay Area resident — writes with such a sure hand and an eye for telling details that his basic premise takes hold at the outset: "Living rooms north of the bridge were garnished with pictures of the Pope and the Virgin Mary. Men fought with guns and married late and had big families, a child a year beginning ten months after the wedding. Parlors south of the bridge carried Norman Rockwell cutouts from The Saturday Evening Post. Men fought with knives and married young. Their wives had their first baby seven months later, with a single brother or sister to follow."

The bridge is the downfall, the source of livelihood and, finally, the possible redemption of the Miracle family. When Martha Pickett crosses the river, she leaves behind a dry Baptist town with "no legal alcohol to be had for tears or money," and marries into the bar-owning Miracles. Bernie Miracle marries the flamboyant young woman from across the river, and expects her to convert not only to Catholicism, but also to his personal religion — making good on his promise to his father to run the family tavern by the bridge until he can pass it on to a son of his own. Their son, known by his family name, grows up to fall in love with the daughter of Martha's best friend, and reverses his mother's footsteps back across the river. Caught in a web of obsessions with the other side of the river, the Miracles, each in their turn, try to break through the confines of their world, but find only heartbreak and disillusionment.

Martha and Miracle cross the river for love and find none. Martha married Bernie because he is new and different, but he turns out to be interested in the new only to the degree that it serves the old. For Bernie, romance is foolishness on the way to the altar and marriage is what Miracle men do in order to beget the next generation. Miracle learns from his father that needing somebody is a sign of weakness, yet he aches all over with that need. Like his mother, Miracle falls in love with the wrong person: a pretty and vain girl whose interest in men is limited to those capable of propelling her into a singing career in Nashville.

Enter the stranger, Talbot Marquand, reeking of what's new and different, and a Northerner to boot. Talbot is in town to build a bridge and connect this remote part of Kentucky with the rest of the country. He, too, pits himself against tradition, but he matches it with the full force of modernity — bulldozers, money and Yankee ingenuity.

In Martha, Talbot stirs "a part that years before she had left behind for dead." But this is a story about love's unfulfilled promises, not its triumphs. In Crossing the River it takes heavy equipment to turn things around, and love has all the "luck of a greenhorn on a snipe hunt."

While his metaphors are colorful and evocative, Johnson can be heavy-handed with the symbols. The town in which Martha comes to build a new life is called New Hope. Her husband Bernie, who essentially entombs her while still alive, also carves her name next to his on the family gravestone. Miracle is described as having his mother's "hair the color of broken brick and eyes like chipped robin's eggs." Even the river floods at the appropriate moment.

Johnson is at his best describing his native region, where people stop for a beer early in the morning on their way to work in bourbon distilleries. In this self-contained world, where even the Vietnam War is just a distant rumble, "women can do as they please behind their husbands' backs," and men "do the same chores as their fathers and grandfathers."

It is the cast of supporting characters that brings small-town Kentucky to life in Crossing the River. Rosie, Martha's best friend, pretends to be a good Baptist, but pulls on her flask of spirit behind her husband's back. Rosie's son finally agrees to a shotgun wedding to his pregnant girlfriend, but on the condition that he can leave for military service the next day. No one embodies more eloquently what Martha is up against than her mother-in-law, who is outraged when Martha receives a letter. "What are you doing getting mail anyway? You're a married woman... I never got a piece of mail in my life that wasn't somebody asking for something I couldn't afford to give."

While the main characters keep their emotions to themselves, the supporting characters speak their minds freely. Their Greek chorus quality serves to underscore the theme of fate in Crossing the River, a novel that explores the consciousness of an insular region doomed to be irreversibly changed.

ASK ISADORA

REMEMBRANCE OF THINGS PAST

By Isadora Alman

Q: I am a male in my early 30s, in good health and engaged to be married, and in both my current relationship and my previous one I find it difficult to achieve orgasm. My sense of things is that it's simply a matter of being jaded, although I find my current lover attractive, sensitive, attentive and sexually pleasing. I have no problem performing, only finishing in an orgasm. Is there any help for a man such as myself, short of a harem and/or extremely kinky strangeness? Any exercises, books, yoga postures? Any way I can regain the intense, uncontrollable excitement of my teens?

A: I wish I knew how to bring back the flat tummy of the teens, the dewy (when not acned) skin, the expectations of the innocent. You want uncontrollable excitement too? Anorgasmia, the lack of orgasm, or (subjectively) undue difficulty in achieving one, is usually due to insufficient stimulation, either physical or mental, or a psychological conflict like fear of losing control. All these possibilities, and more importantly, solutions to them, can best be explored with a good sex therapist.

Q: I don't know where I got the idea, but in my mind there is a connection between blood pressure and ease of orgasm. Since I have very low blood pressure and come to orgasm very slowly, even when I masturbate, this idea makes sense to me. Since orgasm is brought on by blood filling the pubic area, does low pressure fill it slower? Are we hydraulic bodies in this way or, as you have said before, is it all in one's mind?

A: Sexual mechanics aren't all in one's mind, obviously, or most of us would be getting it on safely and in varying ways via telekinesis. Orgasm is not brought about by blood in the pelvic area — engorgement and erection are. Nonetheless, I have no idea about any correlation of blood pressure to erection time or ejaculatory speed. If you find out anything, I hope you'll let me know.

Q: There is an old Irish legend about the hero Diarmuid who had a "love spot" on his forehead: Any women who glimpsed this spot would instantly fall in love with him. I have discovered what is for me the equivalent of the love spot — a chin cleft, with chin dimples running a close second. It doesn't matter what other physical attributes a man has, if his chin is dented, I cream in my jeans. I'm embarrassed to admit that all during the '60s, although I abhorred his politics, I wanted to get it on with LBJ. Luckily, I had Bobby Kennedy to distract me.

I'm aware that this is just another form of "cleavage," a misplaced bust or fanny, but an examination of stars of stage, screen and recording studio indicates the appeal of the cloven chin — witness Michael Jackson, who gave himself one. Is this a fetish? How common is it? What percentage of the population is born with a chin cleft or dimple? And since there seem to be porn magazines and special interest groups for such specialties as foot fanciers, big-bosom fans, uncircumcised penis appreciators and cross-dressing cravers, are there places where I can satisfy my craving?

A: I have no idea how many people either share your preference or are able to trigger it; statistics have never been my forte. Since you mention wanting to actually get it on with cleft-chin owners rather than restricting your sexual attentions to the area above the neck, I'd say that what you have is a partiality rather than a fetish. Webster defines fetish as "an object or a part of the body which arouses libidinal interest often to the exclusion of genital impulses."

In any case, turn-ons are often culturally determined (bones through noses, protruding buttocks) and follow fads (tiny breasts, big breasts, hairy chests or bare). Obviously, our culture has offered some support for yours — I doubt if Kirk Douglas made it solely on his acting talent. Consider yourself lucky to be able to indulge your fancies in any place where people-watching is practiced. Some folks' preference is only visible after long courtships or under very special circumstances. (My own odd partiality is for "ruined" skin on men, like the deeply pockmarked face of the late Richard Burton.)

Want to meet others of your predilection? Put it out there, in print or by word of mouth, and there will soon be a whole bunch of you sitting around together, jawing. ■

FILMS AND VIDEOS — Roxie Cinema

12:30 pm: New Documentary Shorts

These haven't been previewed, but after Tongues Untied, a new video by Marlon T. Riggs is an event.

2:30 pm: Body Law

After Die Yuppie Scum, a new video from Carol Leigh, aka Scarlet Harlot, is an event. Outlaw Poverty, not Prostitutes is good, but not as much fun, being largely made up of personal stories of women from several countries who make their living in the sex industry, often because of economic conditions. Margo St. James is the most interesting speaker of the many Leigh taped at the World Whores' Summit. When they have a Prostitutes' Film Festival, Leigh will be the main attraction. Peril or Pleasure? Feminist-Produced Pornography has been shown and reviewed before, but the issues it raises haven't been resolved. I haven't seen the other four, but these two alone would make for an interesting program about women's issues.

4:30 pm: Because We Must

I don't know about Dance, but I know what I like, and it's not Michael Clark's choreography, which has a cult following in England. The costumes almost make this tarted-up tape of a live performance worth seeing, and it moves too fast to get boring. On the same program, Untitled is a moving and quite watchable tribute to a lover who died of AIDS, and the oft-screened 29 Effeminate Gestures is an introduction to local dancer/choreographer Joe Goode that doesn't make me want to rush out and see him perform.

6 pm: Out on Tuesday, Program Three

"White Flannel" looks at the Masterpiece Theatre approach to gay relationships in the romanticized past. Even more literary is the profile of Indian lesbian poet Suniti Namjoshi, who lives in Canada and writes about multiculturalism in Britain. "Eurovision on Tuesday" takes a light, game-show approach to a serious study of what the uniting of Western Europe in 1992 could mean for gay rights, on which Britain has the most repressive attitudes today. A profile of Greece offers differing views of what the ancient gay paradise, land of Sappho and Socrates, is like for gays today.

8 pm: Positive

The second part of Rosa Von Praunheim's trilogy of AIDS documentaries, this hasn't been previewed. (The third, still in production, will probably be in next year's festival.)

10:30 pm: The Tom Rubnitz Marathon

I don't know much about Tom Rubnitz... It's getting late on Saturday night and you're feeling silly, so maybe you're in the mood for watching New York drag queens and performance artists camp it up. If so, you could do worse than this six-year retrospective of films and videos, most of them upbeat, vividly colored and too short to hate. Ann Magnuson does a tour de force in Made for TV, a great showcase for her that might have gone somewhere if the material were stronger. Rubnitz's latest, The Fairies, shows he's acquiring some polish at last.

SUNDAY, JUNE 24

FILMS AND VIDEOS — Roxie Cinema

Garbo's lesbian past? Sunday at the Roxie.

5 pm: Out on Tuesday, Program Four

An assortment of lesbian seniors discuss their lives in "Women Like Us." Most learned about lesbianism by experiencing it, unless they read The Well of Loneliness, at a time when there was no information on the subject. "Let's Not Pretend" looks at gay parenting in various forms, with the emphasis on the currently controversial (because of proposed regulations in Britain) artificial insemination. A segment on gay clergy comes in the wake of the Church of England commissioning and then trying to suppress a report that recommended tolerance. "Gay Comic Strips" is purely visual, letting you enjoy the work with no information about it.

7 pm: A Woman of Affairs: Greta Garbo's Lesbian Past

Although her alleged lover "outed" her 24 years ago, Garbo's sex life has been as guarded as the rest of her life, but since her death several books have promised to tell all, and the festival hopes to get the jump on them with this presentation, illustrated with clips from every film in which GG wore pants.

9 pm: Tongues Untied

Marlon T. Riggs' non-narrative, non-documentary about black gay men has been televised locally and distributed widely, earning praise wherever it shows. Expressing joy, frustration and anger in many forms, it's a fitting end to a festival in which black gays have been more visible than ever before.

Superlist No. 492: Bay Area shops selling smoking paraphernalia

A shop that sells pipes, water pipes and other nontraditional smoking paraphernalia has traditionally been known as a "head shop." A decade ago, head shops thrived throughout San Francisco and other cities, but in this day and age of drug hysteria, finding one is not so easy. Understandably, merchants of some stores were hesitant in giving out detailed information on their stock, and of course denied that their merchandise is ever connected with illegal activities. Ken Kingsbury, a lawyer in the Alameda County District Attorney's office, explained that there are a pair of California criminal laws that tend to make shopkeepers leery of discussing their trade. One law forbids selling smoking paraphernalia to minors; the other bans selling anything that can be proven to be an implement for ingesting an "illegal substance," like marijuana. In an unused and residue-free state, pipes remain clear of such detection — water pipes could be flower vases or art sculpture for all intents and purposes. Store owners, however, still worry about investigations. Nevertheless, there are a few retailers left who do offer pipes and other accessories such as lighters, screens and scales; most also carry "psychedelic" decor like black-light posters and incense.

San Francisco

Pipe Dreams This store carries smoking paraphernalia ranging from short-stemmed pipes to three-foot-tall water pipes. Costs peak at about $46. Incense, candles and postcards are also available. Mon.-Sat., 10 am-7:50 pm; Sun., 11 am-6:50 pm. 1376 Haight, 431-3553.

The Psychedelic Shop Located near downtown, this Sixties-reminiscent retailer sells pipes and water pipes priced from $10 to $30, along with rare tie-dyes, black-light posters, jewelry and incense. Some items come from Thailand and other countries. Mon.-Fri., 10:30 am-8 pm; Sat., 11 am-8 pm; Sun., 11 am-7 pm. 1098-B Market, 621-0357.

Sid's Pipe Dreams An easy-to-miss wall indentation in an arcade of tiny shops. Sells pipes and water pipes plus cigarettes and tobacco-related accessories. Smoking apparatus ranges from $4 to $80. Daily, noon-6 pm. 531 Castro, 552-0698.

Smokeart Offers tarot cards, tapestries, incense, posters, postcards and an elaborate selection of jewelry, as well as pipes costing from $5 to $10. No water pipes. Daily, 11 am-6:30 pm. 1340 Haight, 861-7133.

East Bay

Annapurna Sells a selection of pipes, water pipes, incense, candles, postcards and Kama Sutra products. Prices start at 93 cents and rarely exceed $40. Mon.-Sat., 10 am-10:30 pm; Sun., 10 am-9:30 pm. 2416 Telegraph, Berk., 841-6187.

Odyssey Head Shop A selection of pipes, water pipes, incense and tapestries is available. Mon.-Fri., 9 am-midnight; Sat.-Sun., 10 am-midnight. 20983 Mission, Hayward, 276-1113.

Puff 'n Stuff A small shop with a small selection of pipes and water pipes. Prices range from $1 to $6. Stock also includes shirts, sunglasses, incense, lighters, ashtrays and an array of lingerie, adult movies and Harley-Davidson products. Mon.-Sat., 10:30 am-8 pm; Sun., noon-6 pm. 4051 Foothill, Oakl., 533-3161.

Marin County

Objects of Pleasure This store features "Indian peace pipes" priced from $28 to $150. A small stock of water pipes is also on hand along with crystals, handmade pottery and the regular run of incense. There's also Grateful Dead pictures and other wall hangings for sale. Mon.-Sat., opening anywhere from 11 am to 1 pm, and closing at 6 pm. 42-C Bolinas, Fairfax, 457-1975. (6/20/90)

WATER WE GOING TO DO?

By Bob Ivry

WHILE SAN Francisco grapples with a budget shortfall, Valerie Heine is determined that the city doesn't stay afloat on her back.

Multiple sclerosis has made it impossible for Heine, once an active person, to run, bike or hike. She uses a walker to get around and says the disease is progressing rapidly. The only recreation still available to her ailing body is swimming.

"It's my survival," Heine said. "The only time I feel good is when I swim."

So it's no surprise that Heine panicked when she learned from another city pool patron that Mayor Art Agnos had ordered $220,000 cut from the pools' payroll budget for this fiscal year. To trim the money, the Recreation and Park Department wants to close the nine city-run pools for a half-day on Sundays and all day on Mondays.

"I feel like I'm losing my life piece by piece," Heine said. "It's like they're taking a couple of days of my life away."

Swimming not only provides Heine with exercise, but she said it has therapeutic value as well.

"If I don't use my legs," she said, "they'll atrophy. No matter how bad it gets for me, my idea is to get into a swimming pool and try to survive as long as I can."

Heine dove headfirst into the fight to save the pool hours. In doing so, she said she has discovered thousands of people like her who engage in America's most popular sport for health reasons, and who would be hurt by any restricting of pool hours.

Most of the nine city pools are on major bus lines, and the admission price — $2 for adults, 25 cents for children and $1 for seniors — keeps them within reach of most San Franciscans. In addition, city pools are used by the school system, mental health providers and youth programs, and any cuts in the personnel budget would likely have a domino effect, making the pools more crowded and less accessible to working people.

"A cut in personnel hours makes no sense," said a frustrated Heine. "The pools will still be there, glistening at the ceiling."

Heine has been involved in circulating petitions, a letter campaign and a telephone push to lobby the Board of Supervisors to restore the $220,000. Lynn Greenlaw of the Rec-Park Department reports that she's received about 100 calls in the last two weeks concerning the proposed budget cuts, and Jean Born of the Aquatics Advisory Board, a citizens committee that acts as a sounding board for the department, is coordinating a massive turnout for the supervisors' hearings.

At press time, Supervisor Wendy Nelder, herself a swimmer, was planning to introduce a resolution to restore full funding for the pools. But with the supervisors threatening to cut Agnos's budget at the June 18th supervisors' meeting, it's not clear that the issue even will be brought up.

In all, the Recreation and Park Department must ax a total of $600,000 out of an annual budget of $8 million, according to Superintendent Joel Robinson. The other proposed cuts include closing the Sharon Arts Studio in Golden Gate Park ($220,000), elimination of an assistant recreation superintendent ($48,000) and three recreational directors (total of $99,000) and a reduction of the department's equipment budget from $47,000 to $10,000.

It doesn't take a Berkeley M.B.A. to figure out who the cuts will hurt the most — young, lower-income families with the kids out of school for the summer, and those, like Valerie Heine, who are fighting to keep the pools open as if they are fighting for their lives.

They're not saying "boo," they're saying "boob tube": Just in time to catch a resurgent Giants squad, SportsChannel has finally come to San Francisco cable TV subscribers. It's available on Channel 21 for $10.45 per month.

The baseball fanatic now has a smorgasbord of action to choose from on the tube. SportsChannel offers approximately 100 Giants and A's games this season, and if that's not enough, there's ESPN's wall-to-wall coverage and broadcasts of our Bay Area teams on Channels 2, 5, and 36.

Cable TV spokespeople won't admit it, but critics say the real reason it took so long to get SportsChannel to sign on with Viacom, San Francisco's monopoly cable provider, has little to do with local issues.

Pat Coony, who has formed a citizens group aimed at policing the cable industry, explains that Viacom's parent company, TCI, Inc., is in direct competition with SportsChannel's parent company, Cablevision Systems Corp., on a new-fangled scheme to hook up cable subscribers to mini-satellite dishes for a fee of about $300. The cable companies would then beam 108 channels directly into customers' homes. The new technology is scheduled for marketing in 1993, and TCI didn't want a Cablevision division to get a foot in the front door as the two companies rush to corner their markets.

Coony, an administrative law judge for the California Department of Social Services, said Viacom was unresponsive to consumers' desires to get SportsChannel because it has no accountability.

"Giants fans were pawns in a massive corporate battle," Coony said. "It isn't just a sports issue, it's a consumer issue."

Coony said he'd like to see local government take more of an interest in how well the monopolies it grants do their jobs. If you feel the same way, the phone number for San Franciscans for Cable Reform is 864-0585.

Big prizes for little minds: Last week, Major League Baseball formally approved the Giants' move to Santa Clara. Now all Bob Lurie needs is the OK from local governments down there, a new stadium and a note from his mother, and he's solid gone. Which gives birth to a double quandary: What to name this new team? And, lest we forget it, what do we do with Candlestick Park for the eight months out of the year the 49ers aren't using it?

Play by Play invites you to write in your suggestions, and promises that the most creative, most sublime, and most stupid will be printed in this space. Who knows, there may even be big prizes! We'll let you know if Lurie is willing to part with a shopping mall.

Nan Yang

The Original Burmese Restaurant of the Bay Area

Ever since we opened in 1983, Burmese Cuisine, as featured in our restaurant, has become the talk of the town. We take this opportunity to thank all the newspapers, magazines, radio and TV networks who have mentioned our restaurant so frequently.

Ever heard of ginger salad? Green tea salad? Green mango salad? Burmese curry chicken noodle soup? Burmese curry fish noodle soup? Garlic noodles? We are proud to say that the uniqueness of these dishes was first introduced in the Bay Area by Nan Yang in 1983.

Now Nan Yang is stepping up and continues to create new dishes, such as curried knish, vegetarian samosa, vegetarian kung bow tofu, etc. They are created right here at Nan Yang - as our contribution to the new California cuisine - in our own way. All of this has been made possible because of your support as patrons.

Thank You.

DINING

Asta owner Robert Kleiner and chef Stefen Reilly share an appetizer of Maryland crab cakes.

A DOG'S LIFE

Art deco-inspired Asta is an elegant place to chow down

By Janet Hazen

ONCE YOU step into this polished, deco-style restaurant, you'll be transported back in time to an era when sipping martinis and lounging about on soft, padded furniture was a way of life. Asta combines the style of the '40s with contemporary, eclectic cuisine. The menu is a sensible mix of improved American with a bit of Mediterranean, Latin American and Italian thrown in for diversity. Asta, the movie-star dog of the "Thin Man" movies, lends his name to the restaurant and is pictured on the back of the small, tidy menu. He can also be seen on one of the TV screens in the bar, which are usually tuned to Thin Man videos. The theme of Asta (the restaurant, not the dog) is solid and smooth, and everything works together in a cohesive but friendly way.

On my first visit, I ended a long day with a fabulous Cajun martini ($3.50). It's difficult to improve a good martini, but soaking jalapeno peppers in vodka and serving the spicy, potent liquid with a splash of dry vermouth makes an unforgettable cocktail. The red wine list is pricey, but the whites start at $14 a bottle.

A Caesar salad ($5.50) made with sliced romaine lettuce and tossed in a very creamy, very balanced dressing was just wonderful. Just the right amount of garlic and anchovies, combined with toasted pine nuts, made this salad a winner. Maryland crab cakes ($7), two deep-fried cakes served with a smoked tomato puree and tartar sauce, were cooked to perfection, but they lacked soul. They make a fine appetizer, but perhaps the kitchen could add some sparkle to the crab batter — a bit of salt wouldn't hurt, either.

We chose a special of the evening that sounded great and turned out to be sensational. Sautéed scallops ($14.75) served in a rich cream sauce with luscious risotto and grilled yellow squash is a good reason to go off your diet. We also ordered grilled ribeye steak ($15), rare, and it was cooked to perfection. The very generous steak came with a choice of potatoes, crisp green beans and a wonderful sauce made with honey and Zinfandel wine. Each element was flawless. It's been a while since I tasted mashed potatoes in a restaurant that actually tasted like potatoes, but these had the true essence of potato.

On our second visit, we started at the bar with those heavenly Cajun martinis and wound up staying for our entire meal. Asta has a small bar menu that offers some of the regular appetizers and also includes some special, more casual items like potato chips with dip ($3.50). A large plate of light, greaseless and very thin potato chips served with a creamy dip made with sour cream and smoked red pepper is too good to resist, and took the edge off our hunger pangs within seconds. We followed that with blue corn pancakes ($6.25) that included thin slices of smoked pork with a black bean and fresh corn relish. This would also make a nice, light dinner when combined with a salad.

Grilled breast of Long Island duck ($14.75), once again a very generous portion, was a delight to eat. Rosy sliced duck breast, served in a slightly sweet sauce made with Vermont maple syrup, came with beautifully sautéed snap peas and a luscious corn pudding. These were exceptionally good companions for the duck. Saffron pasta with green-lip mussels and prawns ($14.50) was big in flavor and delicious. Wide ribbons of pasta, tossed with a rich sauce made with red peppers and slivers of fennel and paired with the succulent seafood, made an excellent pasta dish.

Each dessert looked and sounded great, and all the best American choices are represented on this menu. Pineapple upside down cake ($5), served with a mound of whipped cream and a browned sugar sauce, was heaven. It might be difficult to save room for dessert at Asta, but remember, you can always stop in for an after-dinner drink and dessert.

This understated restaurant offers fine food at unusually fair prices. Chef Stefen Reilly and proprietor Robert Kleiner have managed to make a strong statement without pretense or prices that offend rather than invite. Try Asta soon for cocktails and appetizers or a full, relaxing meal at one of the quiet booths or tables.

Asta, One Rincon Center, 101 Spear, SF, 495-2782. Lunch: Mon.-Fri., 11 am-3 pm. Dinner: Mon.-Sat., 5-11 pm. Visa, Mastercard, American Express. Reservations accepted. No-smoking section. Wheelchair accessible.

MICRO FILMS

By Zena Jones

Another 48 Hours

Don't worry about the plot in Walter Hill's not-exactly-over-the-hill sequel, just regard it as an action movie. (This reviewer's scribbled notes read "Opening biker murder scene, Nick Nolte beaten up, Eddie Murphy's bus shot up, driver killed, spectacular end of bus, Nolte shot, shootout, Murphy's car blown up, shootout with bikers, more mayhem, terrific shootout, incredible action, sensational scenes" — and that was just for starters!) The story line? It's not all that clear, but basically, Nolte needs to nail drug kingpin "Iceman" to keep his job, and discovers Murphy's on said baddie's hit list. That means Murphy's Nolte's main hope and the two are together again, although not on the friendly terms indicated at the end of 48 Hours. But at least Murphy's returned to the minimum use of profanity (for him), and the appealing character that won him instant stardom in the original — may he stay that way for at least another 48 hours! (Royal, SF; California, Berk.; Century, Oakl.)

Eddie Murphy comes around for "Another 48 Hours."

The Big Bang

Listening to director James Toback trying to persuade Joe Kanter to produce this film that has no script, no story and no actors is among its funniest moments. What it does have is 19 highly diverse characters (athletes, musicians, thinkers, an artist, a survivor, a model, a writer, a mother and her two children, a nun and a gangster) who are tossed questions about the cosmos, God, orgasm, identity, love, madness, family, crime and death. All the interviewees are surprisingly articulate and unfazed, and among those also revealing a great deal about themselves in the process are film producer Dom Simpson, Puerto Rican former boxing champion Jose Torres, astronomer Fred Hess, restaurant owner Elaine Kaufman (Elaine's) and gangster Tony Sirico. The film does sag a little when the counterpointing Toback/Kanter banter ceases, but overall it's an unusual, thought- and laughter-provoking work, perhaps less a big bang than a very sharp snap, crackle and pop. (Lumiere, SF)

PRAGUE-JECT

IF VACLAV Havel's Audience piques your curiosity about the Velvet Revolution, you'll find visual evidence of it all around the lobby at Life On the Water, where Audience is having its run.

Art and photos by Czech artists on display at the theater are courtesy of the Prague Project, a vibrant exchange between Czechoslovakian and American artists that has been thriving in the fertile environment of Havel's reforms. The special preview performance of Audience on June 21st is a fundraiser for the Project, as well as a display of its works.

The photographs of Zuzana Swansea will be familiar to anyone who saw The Unbearable Lightness of Being. Swansea, now a California resident, documented the arrival of Soviet tanks during the "Prague Spring" of 1968. Her stills, taken at great risk, were used in the film, and she is the basis in part of both of the female characters.

The current exhibit includes other photos taken earlier this year by Swansea on her return after 22 years' exile. In these shots, the tanks are loaded onto railroad cars, headed back where they came from. Further evidence of this political catharsis is manifest in the work of photographer Eva Konigova and videographer Ivana Grosic, other expatriates who returned to record the changes in their homeland. And there are paintings, for sale for the first time on the West Coast, representing the expressionistic agony of artists forced to work underground before the Revolution.

With funds from the June 21st opening, the Project hopes to be able to purchase equipment and finance further exchanges. Those attending the event will be treated to catered Czechoslovakian desserts and improvised jazz by the Haight-Ashbury Free Band. Corey Fischer of A Traveling Jewish Theatre will read Havel's brief monologue, Thriller.

The Prague Project's exhibit opens with a benefit June 21st, and continues through the run of Audience at Life On the Water (Building B, Fort Mason Center, SF). For information on the Project, call 665-2992.

W SPEAKING FREELY

HO WOULD argue that speaking your mind is a vital aspect of living in a country that's "free"? Jesse Helms and Dana Rohrabacher, that's who. They're two of the most outspoken congress-people currently immersed in debate surrounding the re-funding of the National Endowment of the Arts, and if they get their way the NEA will find itself hacked to pieces, if not killed altogether. (For an in-depth look at the debate surrounding recent attempts at censorship in the arts, see the series of stories beginning on page 19.)

The San Francisco Bay Area Coalition for Freedom of Expression was formed this spring to gather public support against government intervention in the arts. To raise public awareness, and hopefully to get people to take actions such as writing letters to Congress on the subject, the Coalition put together a two-week Festival for Freedom of Expression, which happens June 22nd-July 4th at galleries, music halls and performance spaces all over the Bay Area.

The Coalition's accrued a debt, of course, and needs the public's support to stay active. That's why a few of these events are actually benefits for the Coalition; costs go towards paper, stamps, xeroxing, phone calls, etc. — little things that add up fast. The first is Tuesday, June 26th at Theater Artaud (450 Florida, SF). On the bill are singer Laurie Amat, the dance troupe Contraband, the Joe Goode Performance Group, John O'Keefe and Bob Ernst (doing a segment of Václav Havel's Audience), Leonard Pitt and Hitomi Ikuma, Ellen Sebastian and jazz musicians George Brooks, Molly Holm and Bill Douglass, and the whole evening's emceed by Marga Gomez. The show's at 8:30 pm, and tickets are a $10-$20 donation. Call 621-7797 for details. Other Coalition benefits during the festival include an evening of film, video and poetry at the SF Art Institute on June 30th (771-7020), and a musical showcase at the Paradise Lounge July 1st (861-6906).

Gator bait: Storyteller Anne Galjour and friend.

Alligator Tales

Anne Galjour's monologic stories are like good gumbo: spicy and satisfying. In her solo show, Alligator Tales, which played June 7th-17th at Climate Theatre in San Francisco, Galjour performed four vignettes from the varying perspectives of four Cajun women. Though she's still a somewhat tentative actress, Galjour's gifts as a writer and storyteller made her excellent company.

These yarns were suspenseful and compassionate. In Momma Said to Burn It, a divorced mother attends a party at her ex-husband's new house, and fixates on the lustrous long hair of his new girlfriend. Caiman (Alligator) is about a rattled soul who locks herself out of her house — and suddenly encounters a dark figure from her past. Her slow-burning reaction to him — a mangle of amnesia, disgust and finally open hatred — made this a very subtle commentary on the lingering after-effects of rape. In Le Boucherie, a little girl lost in the woods encounters a creepy old pig butcher. She discovers that the adults who seem scariest are sometimes the kindest — and vice versa. The least satisfying piece, Pour L'Amour De Marianne, was a modern reworking of Hans Christian Anderson's The Little Mermaid from the vantage point of a neighborhood busybody.

All of Galjour's stories conjure an aura of swamp-water mystery. Sharp, vivid images catch you by surprise — a man with wild hair "looks like he'd been licking a light bulb," trees have "oozy green leaves," a beautiful rival smells like "Tabu and Jack Daniels."

As a writer, Galjour brings to mind other Southern women tale-tellers, like Ellen Gilchrist and Flannery O'Connor. As a performer, she needs some work. Her narrow, wide-eyed face is plenty expressive already, but she uses the rest of her body too stiffly. In every other respect her show was nicely directed by Amy Mueller, with a fine sound design by Gina Leishman that included bits of Fats Domino, Professor Longhair and other tasty Louisiana music makers.

Jazz Tap Summit/Savion Glover

"I didn't really choose tap dancing," explains Savion Glover, the 16-year-old phenom most often identified as embodying the future of the American vernacular tradition. "My mom just signed me up, and as I went, I started liking it." From mild interest at the age of 7, Glover has parlayed a career that has already put him on Broadway, television and the silver screen. At 10, he earned a starring role in The Tap Dance Kid on Broadway; next, he joined Gregory Hines, Sammy Davis, Jr. and others in the film Tap; he dazzled TV viewers on the PBS special, Gregory Hines' Tap Dance in America; he is currently on leave from a two-year stint in the Broadway hit, Black and Blue; and he is hoping for a part in a forthcoming CBS show, Shangri-la Plaza. "I don't like to take lessons," Glover confided in a recent phone call from Boston, where he was working on his first choreography commission, teaching routines to 19 kids, 10-18 years old. "I just like to learn from doing shows, like some of the hoofers there will teach me a step or something." Identifying "Sandman" Sims as the old timer from whom he's probably learned the most steps, Glover also reveals a deep admiration for the dancing of Fred Astaire, even though his own style is far more acrobatic (his cousin taught him how to do flips in a graveyard) and improvisational. When he gets on stage, he says, "the whole thing is improvised, none of it is choreographed. I really don't even think about what I'm doing, I just let it come out." For all his skyrocketing success, Glover is still very much the 16-year-old. His mother, Yvette, is his manager, doling out an allowance and seeing that he has time in his busy schedule for both his high school studies and such recreational activities as "playing basketball, going to the arcade or the movies. My mom makes sure I get my free time," Glover says. As to his possible contributions as a dancer, in addition to serving as a role model (he's already done one PBS after-school show teaching match concepts through his drumming and tapping), he suggests, "I can bring in new music, like I started dancing to rap music and stuff and not jazz songs all the time." This Friday and Saturday, June 22nd and 23rd, Glover shows off his stuff along with some of the greatest hoofers in tap history — the Nicholas Brothers, Bunny Briggs, "Sandman" Sims, Steve Condos, Eddie Brown and emcee Charles "Honi" Coles — in the Jazz Tap Summit. Both shows are at 8 pm at Davies Symphony Hall in San Francisco. Call 431-5400 or 864-5449 for information.

WHAT'S THE WORD, JOHANNESBURG?

SARAFINA! Written and directed by Mbongeni Ngema, music by Mbongeni Ngema and Hugh Masekela. At Golden Gate Theatre, SF. Plays through July 8th.

BORN IN THE R.S.A. Written by Barney Simon and the Market Theatre Company of Johannesburg, directed by Barney Simon. At Berkeley Repertory Theatre, Berk. Plays through July 22nd.

By Misha Berson

NELSON AND Winnie Mandela aren't the only eminent South Africans visiting the Bay Area this month. A throng of performers from that land are currently holding forth at the Golden Gate Theatre and the Berkeley Repertory Theatre in two dramatic indictments of apartheid: The exhilarating youth musical, Sarafina!, and the more sober dossier on life under siege, Born in the R.S.A.

It's no surprise that both shows were developed and premiered at the Market Theatre Company of Johannesburg. The three-theater complex, quartered in an old market in the center of South Africa's largest city, has been a beacon of creative resistance and a gathering place for dissident blacks and whites since 1976 — the year of massive student protests in Soweto and the government's retaliation. The Market Theatre has introduced many original dramas to its integrated audience, and in recent years a number have been transported to Berkeley Rep: Asinamali!, Wozza Albert! (both earlier works by Sarafina! creator Mbongeni Ngema) and Sophiatown.

The Market Street shows we've seen tend to be lively bulletins on South Africa's harsh political situation and inspirational calls to keep up political pressure on the white regime. They share an impassioned spirit of rebellion, unadorned staging, the beat of rollicking black street music and a raw, collective exuberance. To American tastes they may seem somewhat crude, a bit shrill in delivering their basic political message. But their most inspiring feature is the optimism they express in the face of the subjugation and terror they document.

Sarafina! eloquently portrays black South African anger and hope primarily through its music and the awesome energy of a young black cast bubbling over with talent and conviction. On tour now after a long New York run, this high-velocity show barely nods to American musical theater conventions. Mbongeni Ngema's script provides little more than a hey-kids-let's-put-on-a-show setup, shifted from the '40s Maine barn of old Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland movies to the black Albert Isaacson High School in Soweto, circa 1976.

What really drives Sarafina! along are its 25 songs, its athletic choreography, its trumpet-spiked rock accompaniment, its jazzy lighting and the open-hearted singing and dancing by an ensemble of more than 30 people — most of them just out of their teens, most of them amateurs trained by Ngema. Though slackly paced in spots, the piece builds to a supercharged finale that lifts you right out of your seat to groove with that irresistible mbaqanga beat.

Set against the fomenting Soweto youth rebellion, the slight plot relates how the firebrand Sarafina! (played with great charm by Leleti Khumalo) leads her classmates away from youthful horseplay and into political activism. For her own outspokenness, Sarafina! lands in jail twice and is probably tortured. In the end, after her mates perform a defiant concert of African dancing at school, she returns to prophesy Mandela's prison release and the dawning of a new, democratic South Africa.

Strong accents and song lyrics mostly in Zulu make the verbal oration in Sarafina! less accessible than the music. The score, composed by director-choreographer Ngema and Hugh Masekela, is a great feast of South African musical idioms — you get a generous earful of harmonized a cappella hymns, rousing political anthems and throbbing jazz-rock stompers. The singers, separately and in choral meldings, simply could not be better. During an agonized funeral scene, and at other key moments, their voices are so pure they tug at the roots of your heart.

Though the performers seem tireless, Sarafina! does drag at times — especially in the confusing, rather didactic second act. And the voices should be amplified with a much lighter hand; these hearty pipes hardly need much boosting. But whatever slow patches or minor glitches there are, the finale alone makes up for them: It's a cut-loose rave-up that would make a stone rise up and cry freedom.

BORN IN the R.S.A. is also enriched with choral "liberation music," and expresses the same political sentiments. But this is a chamber piece with a more complex and somber texture. Written by the original Market Theatre cast with director Barney Simon, it examines the braided fates of seven black and white South Africans around 1985, the year a new round of repressive laws went into effect. That "state of emergency" was finally lifted this year, but in the five intervening years, 30,000 people were detained without charge by government forces. Reports of torture and death in captivity compounded and, in an action that horrified the world, a group of black elementary school children were arrested for rioting and jailed.

Born in the R.S.A. bears witness to these conditions. As if in a legal inquiry, each character steps forward to give testimony and re-enact his or her experiences. They are a dedicated black anti-apartheid leader and her sister, a black jazz musician, a white liberal woman attorney, a woman artist-activist and a young, apolitical suburban couple. Glen, the male member of the couple, is the antagonist who disrupts several lives by acting as a police informant. By the end he has deserted his family, sent his lover and her close political ally to jail and thoroughly rationalized (for himself, if not us) his treachery.

This is full-frontal political theater, staged economically on Michael S. Philippi's stark set of institutional concrete benches and intermittent black prison bars. Immaculately performed by a mixed South African and American cast, it lays out very clearly — almost clinically — the particulars of a bureaucratized brutality against dissidents that most of us can barely conceive of: the constant threat of arrest, weeks in crazy-making solitary confinement, physical torture, extorted confessions, persecution of children, wrenched-apart families.

The lines are clearly drawn here, the characters a one-of-each assortment of "types" along the South African political spectrum. But the slow intertwining of these disparate lives, the quiet accrual of injuries and injustices, personal and political details, is, finally, emotionally devastating. The point is that, in a system this vicious, no one escapes injury — even those who try to remain aloof.

Some local critics have suggested that Born in the R.S.A. comes off as too didactic, and in its failure to acknowledge Nelson Mandela's release and Pretoria's recent lifting of pass laws and the emergency act, too dated — yesterday's agitprop. But Mandela would be the first to point out that apartheid has not ended, and that a few positive gestures cannot erase decades of blatant disregard for human rights. (One wonders if any entrenched system of repression, be it in South Africa or Romania or Argentina, ever goes gentle into that good night.) Topical plays like this one, and Sarafina! too, probably won't be around for posterity. But it is too early to consider the events in them ancient history. ■

Where the giants are: Fafner, Fasolt and Wotan in the SF Opera's Das Rheingold.

RESOUNDING RING

The SF Opera's 'Ring' Cycle opens with a successful 'Das Rheingold'

DAS RHEINGOLD. By Richard Wagner, conducted by Peter Schneider. At the San Francisco Opera, SF, June 12th.

By Stephen Share

WAGNER'S Der Ring des Nibelungen is much more than an opera, some of the current performers are indeed gods and San Francisco Opera's Das Rheingold is a glittering treasure. So what else is new?

The "Ring" is back. The 1985 production by Nikolaus Lehnhoff, which the San Francisco Opera is restaging, is still viable. For the duration, San Francisco is the focus of international attention as Wagnerites from all over the world get their fix.

For all the attention, Das Rheingold, the introductory opera of the four, usually languishes as the forgotten sister in this group. On one level, it's not hard to understand why: There's a lot of arguing but relatively little action, and no love scene to speak of. George Bernard Shaw summed it up brilliantly: "Its dramatic moments lie quite outside the consciousness of people whose joys and sorrows are all domestic and personal, and whose religious and political ideas are purely conventional and superstitious. . . . Only those of wider consciousness can follow it breathlessly, seeing in it the whole tragedy of human history and the whole horror of the dilemmas from which the world is shrinking today."

Shaw's comments, culled from the preface to The Perfect Wagnerite, predate both world wars — but are just as relevant today.

Anyone who may be a little unclear on the story line should turn to Anna Russell or the new DC "Ring" series in comic book format. There's no space to go into it here.

The June 12th San Francisco production of Das Rheingold was a success on almost every front. James Morris as Wotan, the well-intentioned but not-too-bright king of the gods, performed nobly. His bearing is truly superhuman, and he sings stunningly.

Morris doesn't let his character bluster; his anger is well-directed.

His shrewish wife, Fricka, was brought to life by Helga Dernesch. Her acting is brilliant — she doesn't shrill, though she has good reason to. Vocally, she too is of the highest order.

Loge, as performed by Jacques Trussel, was a winner. His presence was that of a 19th-century poet/philosopher, rather than the lawyer-type usually portrayed in this role. Trussel's performance was artful, often charming, and his singing voice was on target for the most part — a welcome change from the unpleasant, sleazy archetype.

Frank Mazura's Alberich did well, as did the three Rhinemaidens, Woglinde (Ann Panagoulas), Wellgunde (Mary Mills) and Flosshilde (Sandra Walker).

Freia (Patricia Racette) looked good and sang well, but not well enough at times. Her voice has a fairly wide vibrato that takes away somewhat from the lyric sweetness. Freia's captors, Fasolt and Fafner, were portrayed by Eric Halfvarson and James Patterson. Halfvarson as Fasolt wasn't entirely convincing as he bemoaned his loss of Freia. Patterson, despite the heavy makeup and costume, informed his character with appropriate cynicism.

Another character who made the most of her short appearance was Birgitta Svenden's Erda. Veiled in red, she moved as an apparition, her stately "Weiche, Wotan, Weiche" issuing forth with dignity and power.

Less than satisfying was the portrayal of Donner by Monte Pederson. Bordering on histrionic at times, his movements were clumsy and unconvincing.

In her directorial debut with the company, Laurie Feldman showed considerable skill. Among other cute moves was the idea of having Mime scoot up and down the Nibelung rock to coincide with his description of fantasies and failures.

Peter Schneider conducted with a force perfectly suited to the score. He almost never overshadowed the voices on stage and maintained good communication with all concerned. He conducted Das Rheingold in his U.S. Opera debut.

Where punk meets folk: Poi Dog Pondering's music is an odd but original mix.

POI DOG WANDERING

After a long and tortuous odyssey around the U.S., Poi Dong Pondering has settled down and moved up

By Gina Arnold

THE BIGGEST drawback to tropical island life is mental stagnation. Even on the big ones, surrounded by white sandy beaches and sparkling blue waves — the ones that seem like paradise to those who go there for vacation — there comes the inevitable moment in every native youth's life when they find themselves irrevocably, irretrievably, unalterably...bored.

Frank Orrall, lead singer and guitarist for Poi Dog Pondering and a native of Honolulu, took a bit longer than most Hawaiians to grow tired of the scenery there. He was all of 25 when he took off with his band for mainland shores. But unlike other, more anxious and ambitious islanders he knew, Frank had a vision, one that burned so strong he managed to convince eight of his friends to share it with him.

You see, he wasn't looking for a mere record contract; he was looking for adventure. And he was convinced, by nothing but the stories he'd read about Jack Kerouac and Woody Guthrie, that he'd find it on the road.

Sure, it was 1986 — no 1956. What difference did that make? In Honolulu, where, he claims, "There's a lot of great bands but they break up really fast," Orrall belonged to a band called Food, and another called Poi Dog Pondering, each of which played on street corners in Waikiki. Orrall felt sure he could do that in every city. So he and eight friends sold all their belongings at a series of weekend garage sales and took off for Los Angeles, where they bought two cars — an old Mustang and a GMC Suburban. They then set out for Alberta, Canada, where they had Hawaiian friends, with plans to play everywhere in between.

"We had no expectations whatsoever," recalls Orrall. "We didn't even know how long we were going to stay on the mainland. Some of us had almost no money, and some of us had a lot. And we were all different ages, from 18 to 26. We wanted to see all of America — Texas, California and especially Louisiana. We had visions of raunchy roadhouses and back-road bars; that we'd be allowed to play in them...that we'd even be able to find them!"

That Orrall thought that raunchy roadhouses would welcome his band's odd mix of gentle, folksy music, Hawaiian and African rhythms, horn and accordion filler and '60s-ish cover sensibility (though he prefers to think of his band as '50s-influenced rather than '60s-influenced) proves just how island-bound he'd been up till then. Though he'd spent some time on the mainland, Orrall's knowledge of alternative music came, he says, not so much from touring bands but "almost entirely from the rock press, and mostly the English press, N.M.E. and Melody Maker, which we got in Hawaii."

That and the import bins at Honolulu record stores shaped Orrall's and his friends' music into something that contains both a punk sensibility of sorts and something of a strangely idealized, almost spiritual folk vein.

"Most rock music seems to have lost a lot of its ability to be direct," Orrall says. "All these people are trying to be larger than life, and they do that by being obscure. Whereas I try not to waste time on metaphors, in order to be simpler. I find that if you're earnest in what you say, people can sense it in the music anyway."

What Orrall has to say is pretty darned charming, and the result is a band whose cheerfulness of spirit is downright refreshing — and completely unique. Which may be what made Poi Dog Pondering's subsequent eight-month journey across America such a success.

The trip did not begin on a promising note, however. Two hours outside of L.A., on the caravan's first day, the van broke on the Grapevine and got towed to Barstow.

"This," Orrall recalls, "sent ripples through the entire entourage, because it was going to cost so much money to fix, and some of us only had a little money, and they realized right then that it was going to be used up on stupid stuff like that. That was our first real communal test. But the amazing thing was that the camaraderie remained so high when the unknown loomed so large."

The Poi Dog train pushed on through San Francisco, where they played on Fisherman's Wharf — "It was super cold for August and we made hardly any money, which surprised us a lot" — then to Portland and Seattle.

At Canadian immigration, Poi Dog ran the risk of being deported because the GMC, filled with instruments, was so suspicious-looking. "They asked us if we were all American, and I accidentally said yes, when one of us was French," recalls Orrall. "Then they asked if we were a band, and I accidentally said no, and they didn't believe us."

Finally they were admitted to Canada, and reached Alberta without mishap. It wasn't until they'd begun their homeward journey, however, that they figured out how to make a living as street musicians, and that was almost by accident.

"It was when we were in Davis, California, visiting a friend," Orrall recalls. "And our car broke, yet again. We thought we could find some busy downtown street to play on, like we had everywhere else, but when we looked, there was no downtown! And no foot traffic on any street. So finally we went to the college coffee house — duh! — that was when we figured out what really worked. On college campuses it was more our crowd. People would call out songs, they'd give us money and food and invite us over to their houses to sleep. And almost always someone would come up to us and say, 'Hey, I have a radio show, you want to come and play on the air?'"

"After that," he continues, "we learned how to eat better, to choose better places to go. We'd just go from college town to college town, and it was more hospitable — we could stay longer and stuff. We went from Davis to Santa Cruz to Santa Barbara to San Diego to Phoenix to Los Cruzos and El Paso."

There they ran into trouble again. From El Paso it was 14 hours to the next nearest college town, Austin, and the band didn't have enough gas to make it. They thought they could play in towns along the way, but, as Orrall recalls, "They were all little backwaters, where no one would hear us."

About two hours into the Panhandle they realized they wouldn't have the money to make it, so they pawned a camera lens and picked up a hitchhiker who they hoped would help pay for gas. He refused, and the band eventually found itself playing to a bunch of violent teenagers in a Pizza Hut parking lot — for no money. Finally they scrounged enough change by stripping the cushions for what had fallen between the cracks to limp into Austin, where they slept on top of the car hoods — for fear of snakes — by the side of the road.

"And that day," Orrall remembers, "was such a turning point. Because we were ready to wire for money to go home to Honolulu. We were totally demoralized. Our usual mode was to go the college and mope around the student union, use the sinks and bathrooms and stuff, and then play around the coffee house. And that day someone handed us two $20 bills when we were playing — a fortune — and we met this guy who put us up for two months!"

Orrall and the rest of Poi Dog Pondering — only two current members of which were on this apocryphal journey — ended up moving back to Austin after they finished their U.S. odyssey a few months later, and they live there to this day. Orrall originally disbanded Poi Dog when it reached New York for the first time — "Those final two months really tapped us" — but put it back together again when he was offered a record contract by Michael Meister, whose Los Angeles record store, Texas Hotel, was starting up a label. So Orrall recorded some new songs — which eventually became their second EP, Circle Around The Sun — and re-formed the band with some new members.

Then Meister got the band a booking agent, who, ironically, found it impossible to get them any gigs whatsoever. "Here we'd played in every single city in America," laughs Orrall. "We knew people everywhere, and yet we couldn't get booked in a real club."

Actor/director Warren Beatty: You can dress him up, but you can't make him Dick Tracy.

BIG-BUDGET BLOWOUT

If it wasn't for all the hype, Dick Tracy would have been a light, entertaining movie

DICK TRACY. Directed by Warren Beatty. At the Regency I and II, Geneva D-I SF; Grand Lake, Oakl.; Shattuck, Berk.

GREMLINS 2: THE NEW BATCH. Directed by Joe Dante. At the Coronet, UA Stonestown, SF; Grand Lake, Coliseum D-I, Oakl.; Shattuck, Berk.

By Steve Warren

IN DICK Tracy, Madonna as Breathless Mahoney sings the Stephen Sondheim lyric, "Something's better than nothing, yes, but nothing's better than more." With tongue presumably in cheek, Sondheim expresses the philosophy behind the supposed blockbusters that are coming at us, one or two a week. The summer's not even half over, and I've been persuaded by Bird on a Wire, Back to the Future, Part III, Total Recall, Another 48 Hrs. and Dick Tracy that more is worse.

In the old days, these could all have been modest, respectable entertainments that turned a modest, respectable profit, but since Lucas and Spielberg started upping their production values — initially without sending budgets into the stratosphere, it should be noted — things have escalated, with each picture's hype matching its out-sized production. The public reads the grosses as avidly as people in the industry, and the new mentality says a movie ain't shit unless it grosses more than $100 million. The irony is that studios are spending more than that amount in their effort to reach the goal, thus often suffering a net loss, even if they succeed.

Consider the legendary two-way wrist radio in Dick Tracy. "A jeweler in Santa Clarita, California," the press kit informs us, "made up ten of them in sterling silver, at a cost of about $600 each." They don't really function as radios, "but the watch mechanism works... second hand and all." As I recall, there is one close-up of one of these gizmos, lasting about two seconds — barely long enough to notice that it's silver-colored, let alone sterling. Any old Timex with a speaker drawn in would have fooled us. I suspect the propmaster used to work in purchasing for the U.S. Navy.

Money will never replace imagination, although it can buy the best imaginations in the business and make them too lazy to be creative. It can also buy the biggest stars and give them a make-the-money-and-run attitude toward their work.

Dick Tracy is one of the better summer movies — though not as good as Cadillac Man or Gremlins 2: The New Batch — but in trying to give us more of everything it overstates its welcome, repeating itself and dragging before it ends.

Producer-director Warren Beatty, reportedly trying to be faithful to the original comic strip, made a serious mistake in hiring himself to play the title role. You can dress him up, but you can't make him Dick Tracy. If there's one thing that stands out about the comic character it's his square jaw, and Beatty has the roundest chin this side of Roseanne Barr. What's needed is a Clint Eastwood, Charles Napier or Adam (Batman) West. The incorruptible Tracy is as square as his jaw, but

Money will never replace imagination, although it can buy the best imaginations in the business and make them too lazy to be creative.

Beatty has to hammer the point home — and remind us of his own image as a stud — by having him endlessly tempted by Madonna, who is one of the best things about the movie until we get too much of her.

The second thing I remember about the comic strip is the villains. There was usually one at a time for Tracy to pursue for months on end, each with a gimmick to match his odd appearance. The movie has to be more visual — there are bigger "panels" to fill — so we get dozens of actors in bizarre makeup, each of their group scenes resembling the Star Wars cantina. But gimmicks? Only Dustin Hoffman has one, and his character's name, Mumbles, says it more clearly than he does. He's used sparingly, perhaps to avoid another Ishtar, and is the one actor who isn't on screen long enough for us to tire of him or her. His performance is the equivalent of Jack Nicholson's in Batman.

The others are standard gangster-movie gangsters with funny faces. Hunchbacked Al Pacino is their leader, Big Boy Caprice. Semi-unrecognizable and constantly over the top, he's funny at first, but wears thin, like virtually everything else. How much can we take of Glenna Headly's long-suffering Tess Trueheart and the de facto nuclear family she and Tracy establish — despite Tracy's unwillingness to make a commitment (is it really 1938?) — when the cop picks up street kid Charlie Korsmo and straightens him out, complete with the sentimental name-picking bit from A Thousand Clowns.

Aside from Madonna's neo-Mae West dialogue (when on-the-make Pacino tells her, "Around me, if a woman don't wear mink she don't wear nothin'"), she retorts, "I look good both ways") and a few of Pacino's misquotes of great philosophers ("If you ain't for the people you can't buy the people"), Dick Tracy isn't much of a comedy, and the pace is too leisurely for it to qualify as an adventure. There's a lot of bloodless violence, but the stunts aren't spectacular by contemporary standards, and this Dick isn't tricky enough.

Much has been made of the exclusive use of "seven primary colors" to give Dick Tracy its distinctive look. It's certainly brighter than Batman, but seven primary colors? When I went to school there were only three (rust and orchid, for instance, were not among them), but they've had time to discover new ones since then. What I like best about the movie's look — aside from the makeup, which is spectacular — is the way the sets are matted into cartoon landscapes. One good thing about its self-contained artificial world is that it gives us a two-hour respite from product plugs, a corporate decision of overwhelming generosity.

Everything's louder than it needs to be, but the period pastiche songs by Sondheim and others work well in context. Madonna's a better actress than vocalist this time around. "You don't know if you want to hit me or kiss me," she vamps. "I get a lot of that." (Yes, it's 1938.) Perhaps she should have told Beatty it's not the size of the Dick that counts.

If you can forget the hype and lower your expectations to a pleasant, average entertainment, Dick Tracy will fill the bill. But it could have filled it better if it hadn't run up such a bill.

THE SAME is true of Back to the Future, Part III, which winds the trilogy up nicely by giving us more of Christopher Lloyd, less of Michael J. Fox and adding Mary Steenburgen to the mix.

Another 48 Hrs. and Bird on a Wire are total losses, greedy attempts to cash in on star appeal without a script for a foundation. The preview audience chattered all through the 48 Hrs. sequel, except when Eddie Murphy got that "I'm gonna say something funny now so y'all shut the fuck up" look in his eyes; they obviously didn't care what the plot was, if there is one. The funniest thing about Bird, which wastes the talents of Goldie Hawn and Mel Gibson, is the attempt to pass off Vancouver locations as New York, Detroit and Atlantic City (oh, those Jersey mountains).

Total Recall shows so much imagination and attention to detail in its early scenes, it's too bad they give up toward the end and rely on standard action sequences to resolve everything. It's worth seeing for the irony of Arnold Schwarzenegger fighting Ronny Cox, who plays exactly the kind of politician

Arnie supports in real life.

Gremlins 2: The New Batch is easily the best of the summer sequels so far, shifting the action from a small town to a big city and paving the way for John Glover, as a blatantly obvious combination of Donald Trump and Ted Turner, to pave over everything else. With the title creatures yielding few surprises, Bay Area screenwriter Charlie Haas has sent the story off in new comic directions that should please film buffs, unless they demand subtlety.

There's less cornball sentiment this time, but movie in-jokes come thick and fast, with references to Marathon Man, Apocalypse Now, Rambo, The Wizard of Oz and Warners' own Batman and the forthcoming Phantom of the Opera, to name a few. The pesky Mogwais interrupt a plug for the Gremlins video, and in a clever sequence even take over the theater you're watching this movie in. Christopher Lee plays a high-tech mad scientist, and tourists observe the Cathedral of Saint Eva Marie. No joke is too low.

The point about feeding gremlins after midnight falls by the wayside, but much is made of their asexual reproduction when moistened and their fear of bright light. Unfortunately, the script is very inconsistent on the last item. Flashlights scare the Mogwais, but not the lights in a TV studio; and they even turn searchlights on themselves when they throw a party in the lobby.

A shredder substitutes for the food processor of the original Gremlins to subvert the innocent tone for a momentary gross-out, but basically Gremlins 2 is a new batch of fun.

Trend of the week: Zach Galligan's Billy in Gremlins 2 is sexually harassed by his female boss, Marla (Haviland Morris), as Beatty's Dick Tracy is by Breathless Madonna. ■

Kamikaze Ground Crew: Musical acrobatics and a whole lot of swing.

ECLECTIC ENSEMBLES

KAMIKAZE GROUND CREW AND CLUB FOOT ORCHESTRA. At Julia Morgan Theater, Berk., Friday, June 9th.

By Derk Richardson

PROGRAM A concert with one band that originated as the pit players for the Flying Karamazov Brothers and another that has built its reputation by providing original, live accompaniment to old, silent, German expressionist films, and you should have a mondo bizzaro evening of musical slapstick and overwrought melodrama.

Not exactly. The recent double billing of the Kamikaze Ground Crew and the Club Foot Orchestra, at Berkeley's beautifully revamped Julia Morgan Theater (repeated two nights later at the packed Great American Music Hall), was not all hilarious guffaws and horror-stricken gasps. Rather, through two sets of superb original material and cleverly chosen cover versions, the somewhat sparsely attended concert reaffirmed the Bay Area's standing as a spawning ground for creative small orchestras.

The seven Kamikaze members provided their share of belly laughs and titters. Bob Lipton's tuba, Gina Leishman's uke, accordion, fragmented piano and eccentric vocals and a cheerful romp through "Teddy Bears Picnic" did lend a certain Spike Jones-meets-John Phillips Sousa air to the opening set. But the Kamikazes (who included wind-and-string player Doug Wieselmann, New York trumpeter Steven Bernstein, trombonist Jeff Cressman, drummer Danny Frankel and saxophonist Ralph Carney, replacing Peter Apfelbaum) also applied their unique instrumentation to original compositions, a Duke Ellington piece and the King Oliver-associated jazz number, "Wa-Wa-Wa." All of the individual musicians were impressive in their dazzling, acrobatic solo fights, but the exotic septet was especially remarkable for its ability to swing. The Ground Crew's new recording, The Scenic Route, will be released by New World Records next week.

While the Kamikaze outfit takes a high dive into a dangerously shallow tank shared by circus music and serious composition, and emerges victorious, Club Foot Orchestra takes you into darkened movie houses, surrounds you with music noir, and then leads you blinking back into the sunshine. The Club Footers, who haven't played a regular concert date in two years — they've been executing Richard Marriott's scores to The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari and Nosferatu — unveiled a new, delightfully varied repertoire. From a core of Marriott pieces, including a moody Nosferatu medley, the nine-member band branched out into fine compositions — "Sixth and Natoma" by drummer Gino Robair, a funky tune by bass guitarist/tuba player Bob Lipton and an especially evocative feature by clarinetist Beth Custer — and displayed even more range by meeting the challenge of Charlie Haden's "Silence" and Sun Ra's "Little Pyramids."

Like Kamikaze, Club Foot is bursting with individual talent, including saxophonists Dave Barrett and Josh Ende, violinist Kaila Flexer, guitarist Steve Kirk and trumpeter Doug Morton, and its set was promising for the way the orchestra is testing new directions beyond Marriott's vision.

The booking agent could only muster up one gig, and that one was in Hawaii. So Poi Dog set off again in their GMC van, this time heading west, playing all the street corners of their old haunts. By the time they got back to Hawaii, in late 1988, they'd shaken that island fever.

But they'd also attracted the attention of Columbia Records, who signed them in 1989, re-releasing Poi Dog Pondering and Circle as one record — one so highly thought of that Rolling Stone used it as its lead review in October of 1989.

Early this year, Poi Dog released its second LP, entitled Wishing Like a Mountain and Thinking Like the Sea, which, thanks to Orrall's big imagination and Poi Dog's already colorful history, is an album that easily puts the group at the head of a list of great new alternative bands for the '90s — especially live, where the band's long stint of road work has paid off with a loose professionalism that's irresistibly fun to watch.

It sure doesn't hurt matters that in every city they go to, Poi Dog Pondering is well-acquainted with many members of the audience. These days, Columbia funds the band's U.S. journeys, and will soon be sending them to Europe. All of which makes

Perhaps because the band has been so focused on the film projects recently, it didn't sound as comfortable or impart its distinctive group identity — disciplined yet loose — on the newer pieces. But, also like Kamikaze, it is striding at the forefront of an exciting movement in which large, eclectic ensembles are further eroding old musical boundaries.

MUSICAL CATEGORIES of any kind are ignored from the outset by Davey Williams and his partner LaDonna Smith, who are in town for two rare East Bay performances this weekend. Williams, a "West Alabama free blues surrealist guitarist," and Smith, who takes her classical training on viola and violin over the edge of a precipice from which there is no return, are improvising musicians from Birmingham, Alabama. They force reviewers to the ends of their descriptive tethers. Among the most amusing attempts to capture the sound in words are Art Lange's from Downbeat — "at its wildest an orgasmic yelp, at its most intimate like the inside of a pumpkin growing" — and Peter Watrous's estimation in the Village Voice that "Williams can do more with his guitar than Reagan does with the truth."

Williams is known as one of the American pioneers of improvising guitar, along with Eugene Chadbourne and Henry Kaiser, and for his contemporary work in the bands Bongwater and Curlew (which played the recent Knitting Factory show at DNA). His music is rooted in Mississippi Delta blues — he played extensively with Johnny Shines in the early '70s — but more than 15 years ago he and Smith formed Trans as "an outlet for the development of intuitive and free-improvised music." To the same end, they also started an independent record label, Trans Museq, and a journal, The Improvisor.

Using a variety of extended instrumental techniques — "object guitar" (which entails applying anything from stones to rubber toys to the strings), bowing, muting, scraping — and instantaneous compositional methods — "pianistic deceleration," the "Listening Post" system, the "Burma Shave" and "Mockingbird" methods — Williams and Smith, in his words, "visit intuitive places or states" in a "search for subconscious ethnic music." The results can be harsh "convulsive blues" or surprisingly lacy and non-aggressive interplays of strings and voice.

"Improvising, for me," Williams wrote last year in Guitar Player, "is almost a state of unconsciousness. You kind of lose your awareness because you're leaning into the present." Lean into "the homeland of poetic hearing" with Williams, Smith and Berkeley's astounding and equally unpredictable pianist Greg Goodman this Saturday, 8 pm, at Koncepts Cultural Gallery, 480 Third St., Oakland; or Sunday, 8 pm, at Woody Woodman's Finger Palace, 903 Cedar, Berkeley. (Reservations required Sunday.) Call 644-1084 for more information. ■ for a fairy-tale finish for Orrall's original, island-fed fantasy.

"I know," he laughs. "And it's funny, because back in Hawaii, when we first thought of the idea, people kept going, 'Hey, you can't go to the mainland and play on the street; face reality man!' So we had this saying, which was, 'When reality rears its ugly head, you've got to chop it off.' In retrospect, the whole thing was so incredible, but the best part was...well..."

Orrall pauses mid-sentence. "Well, the best part was the whole thing. In a way...you really had to be there." ■

John Cale and Lou Reed.

Lou Reed/John Cale, Songs for Drella (Sire)

Whatever tensions did or didn't get worked out — between these two Velvet Underground founders, between them and mentor Andy Warhol — this anticipated reunion/memorial channels them into words and music that are stark and rich, affectionate and resentful, generous and petty, tender and edgy, raw and refined, art and rock. There's nothing here but voices, guitars, keyboards and viola — and more spirit than most pop music can bear. It's a detailed biographical portrait of Warhol and his work, and a surprising upwelling of an oft-repressed current that runs from the Velvet Underground through the Sex Pistols into the present.

— Derk Richardson

Charlie Musselwhite, Memphis Charlie (Rhoolie CD) and Ace of Harps (Alligator)

The 19 years between the earliest of these sessions on Memphis Charlie and the Alligator comeback were not the kindest to the great Mississippi-born, Memphis-bred and Chicago-seasoned blues harmonica player. But these two Musselwhite albums show why he is one of the most respected white bluesmen out of the Sixties revival, and how he has resurrected himself in fine form.

The crisply remastered Rhoolie CD combines tracks from 1971 and 1974 sessions, the former with guitarist Robben Ford and the latter featuring pianist Lafayette Leake and local Rat Band leader/Robert Cray guitarist Tim Kaihatsu. Ace of Harps shows off a revitalized Musselwhite supported by the tight trio of guitarist Andrew Jones Jr., bassist Artis Joyce and drummer Tommy Hill, with Bay Area keyboardist Jimmy Pugh sitting in on three tracks. The early sides have raw energy and rollicking piano going for them; the new record boasts a kick-ass band, warm, mature vocals and exemplary, expressive harp playing from a master joyfully reaching a new peak.

— D.R.

The Rave Ups, Chance (Epic)

When I heard "Positively Lost Me" off the Rave Ups' indie label debut, Town + Country, the tune hit me so hard my hair stood on end. Band leader Jimmer Podrasky writes and sings like his life depends on it, and the rest of the Rave Ups fill in the blanks with a big, bad guitar sound that's part bluesy sting, part country twang — a perfect complement to Podrasky's big emotional statements.

Chance, the band's second major-label effort, is packed with harsh, desperate rockers in the same mold. "The Best That I Can't" portrays the anguish of a family man trying to make ends meet in a world he never made; "For the Loser (Hallelujah!)" celebrates the futility of that same struggle. "She Says (Come Around)" introduces a girl who tells her beau she'll do anything to escape her present boring life. The hero of "Tinker Tommy" tosses out psychotic non sequiturs while a sitar-ish sounding high-string guitar wails in the background.

Over the years, Podrasky's pessimistic streak has ripened into a poetic fatalism that gives these songs a brooding noir quality. The lyrics are a parade of the little tragedies that make up most lives ("the coffee's hot, but the lovin's not" is how he sums up a failing relationship on "If It Was [a Matter of Mind]"), but Podrasky's tormented Dylan/Petty vocals inject the tales with enough compassion to counter the grim subject matter. The sound is on the border between country, rock, acid thrash, psycho-pop and down-home, white-boy blues, a perfect place to be if you're one of the borderline personalities that Podrasky writes about.

— J. post

Sinatta, Wicked (Atlantic)

Wicked is pleausurably generic, a study of retro styles that supplies a '70s disco flashback. There's that old churning bass line and the pleasingly commonplace vocals of the diva, whispering her message of fun and the possibilities of sweaty seduction in an exuberantly detached way, that recalls the transient excitement of yesterday's one-hit, 12-inch-single wonders. There's plenty of fine high-N-R-G music here, and most tracks will get a party pumping, but despite the obvious technical perfection, there's something about the project that fails to move me.

Wicked's strengths and weaknesses are summed up by the cover of Maxine Nightingale's "Right Back Where We Started From," the tune that introduces the set. The chunky, syncopated beat that gave the original arrangement its tension is jettisoned for a big, bland state-of-the-art reading that motivates the feet without touching the heart. The same holds true for the vocals. Nightingale had a soulful rasp in her voice — she desperately wanted her lover to give her another chance, and she made you believe it — but Sinatta sounds like she's merely having a good time covering an old hit. It's kind of like the dance-club equivalent of New Age Muzak — exuberant and buoyant enough while you're listening to it, but forgettable when the music's over.

— J.p.

EnVogue, Born to Sing (Atlantic)

EnVogue is the latest group to benefit from the production smarts of the Foster/McElroy 2-Tuff-E-Nuff team, and like their predecessors (Tony, Toni, Tone, Michael Cooper, Club Nouveau, etc.) they have the vocal chops, good humor and musical smarts to go all the way. The tunes, all of which were written by the group with the help of the producers (except for a short version of "Boogie-Woogie Bugle Boy" renamed "Hip-Hop Bugle Boy"), are charmers, the usual F/M combination of classic R&B and new jack swing anchored by pounding beats and strong melodies. And unlike many "girl groups," EnVogue concentrates on hard, slamin' jams. I hear several potential hits, including the opener, "Strange." Like Tony, Toni, Tone's "Little Walter," "Strange" uses a well-known gospel riff to build up a pop feeding frenzy as the group drops science on the manipulative games male people play. Other dance-floor contenders are "Hold On," a tough, mid-tempo jam about lost love with a spine-chilling a cappella intro; "Lies," with a down-and-dirty Bo Diddley beat that's been hip-hopped to the max to make its cynical point — everybody lies, from teachers to preachers to politicians to boyfriends; and "You Don't Have to Worry," an easy-rocking track that owes a production debt to the sound of Teddy Riley and Gene Griffin.

On the slow sid, shed a tear with the girlfriends on "Waitin' on You," an aching my-man-done-me-wrong opus (only on the CD, sorry), "Part of Me," a dramatic pop statement with a quietly intense gospel flavor, and "Hold On," a hymn that looks above for hope in the face of modern-day problems.

FRIDA AND DIEGO In addition to being two of the most compelling Mexican painters of the 20th century, Frida Kahlo and Diego Rivera were also a sort of Sid and Nancy of the art world. To get further insight into the lives, loves and work of these two fascinating artists, go see Diego Rivera, I Paint What I See and Frida, two film biographies starting tonight at the York. Diego, in its West Coast premiere, focuses on Rivera's life as a muralist, which stemmed from his leftist convictions and sympathy for the Mexican revolution. Frida offers a dramatic recounting of Kahlo's lifelong battles against physical and spiritual pain, along with what sounds like a pretty fiery tale of love affairs with Leon Trotsky and the aforementioned painter. Diego plays Fri.-Wed. at 7:30 pm and Sat.-Sun. at 4 and 7:30 pm; Frida follows each screening. York Theatre, 2789 24th St., SF. $5. 282-0316.

EDDIE HARRIS The jazz saxophonist, who has brought almost as many technical innovations to his instrument as he has to the music, performs with his quartet this week. Last year, when Harris appeared with Les McCann, I was left hungry for more solo work by the astounding tenor man. This time out, Harris, who tastefully blends elements of funk and soul in his sophisticated post-Trane playing, should have plenty of room to stretch out. 9 and 11 pm, Kimball's, 300 Grove, SF. $15. 861-5555. (Also Sat/23.)

JAZZ TAP SUMMIT Here's a rare opportunity to see some of the high priests of jazz tap, along with a few of its rising stars. FOLK ART OF THE SOVIET UNION If you've sufficiently recovered from your 'Gorbasm,' and want to get a more populist perspective on the Soviet Union, now's your chance to view the most extensive collection of Soviet art ever presented in the U.S. This incredibly diverse show features more than 750 objects from the collection of the State Museum of Ethnography of the Peoples of the U.S.S.R., which handles all 15 republics of the Soviet Union. The exhibit includes rugs from Central Asia, Ukrainian glass and ceramics, Siberian ornamented costumes and other exotic artworks, most from the 19th century, which represent the country's roughly 100 different ethnic groups. June 21st-July 29th; daily, 10 am-6 pm. SF Craft & Folk Art Museum, Building A, Fort Mason Center, Buchanan at DOROTHY ALLISON AND RUTHANN ROBSON As part of their ongoing "Festival for Free Expression," the SF Bay Area Coalition for the Freedom of Expression and Intersection for the Arts present a public reading by these two funny and subversive writers. Robson's Eye Of a Hurricane won the 1989 Ferro-Grumly award for outstanding lesbian writers, and the title of Allison's novel alone — Trash, The Women Who Hate Me — should be enough to recommend her. 8 pm, Intersection for the Arts, 446 Valencia, between 15th and 16th streets, SF. $4-$2. 626-2787.

BLACK MOVEMENT FORUM This "Forum on Counterinsurgency" discusses U.S. actions against the black community, from the COINTELPRO attack of the '60s to the current $8 billion "war on drugs." Speakers include former Black Panther Deborah Akua Johnson, Inaku Yeshitela, chairman of the African People's Socialist Party, and several others involved in the struggles and issues surrounding the black movement. 7:30 pm, Uhuru House, 7911 MacArthur, Oakl. 569-9620 or 839-2306.

MINOR WHITE Many consider Minor White to be one of the most important photographers of the post-World War II era. Along with Edward Weston, Ansel Adams and Alfred Stieglitz, White helped to define a distinctly modern, American photographic style that brought new lyrical and meditative qualities to the American scene. This exhibit is one of the first major retrospectives of White's work, and it offers about 185 of his photographs, ranging from portraits and nudes to landscapes and architecture. Some of the photos, including ten color prints and some rare street shots of SF in the '40s, have never been shown. June 22nd-Aug. 19th. Gallery hours are Tues., Wed. and Fri., 10 am-5 pm, Thurs., 10 am-9 pm, and Sat.-Sun., 11 am-5 pm. SF Museum of Modern Art, 401 Van Ness, SF. $4. 863-8800.

THE HEARTS TERRAIN This site-specific performance offers a "landscape of dreams" through dance, visual images and music. The performance features "sound sculptures" by Victor Mario Zaballa and Richard Kilen, along with choreography and performance art by Anah K. Coates and Darcy Elman, the piece's creators. The show promises to be pretty otherworldly, "leading the audience through a walking dream as they stalk revelations through the terrain of the heart." I NTERSECTION FOR the Arts came back into being this past weekend after an earthquake-inspired move with a wham-bam local music showcase June 15th, which doubled as a grand opening benefit party for Intersection's new space (446 Valencia, SF). Though not Intersection's usual fare, I'm glad that the folks there were interested enough to give local rock a shot. (My friend from New York made a good point, something that's easy to miss if you live here: A show like this in Manhattan would be filled with gussied-up posers on the make — that is, if anyone could afford to put it on at all; let's thank our lucky star charts that down-to-earth music and art still mean more to a lot of people here than scenemaking.) Intersection's space sure lent itself well to the show, what with its high ceilings and lack of distracting post-punk/modern obstructions (excuse me, "decorations"); it reminded me mostly of those informal, punk-rock "spaces" I used to see shows in back in New England.

The lineup of Barbara Manning, Ed's Redeeming Qualities, the Pounding Birds, the Plastic Kittens, X-Tal and A Subtle Plague was a full five hours of musical truth, and included a few new items. ERQ was one, an eclectic trio from Boston somewhat reminiscent of the toy instrument-group Pianosaur or the more distortion-oriented Beat Happening. For me, though, the surprise of the night was how much better the Pounding Birds sounded since I first heard them two months ago at the Paradise Lounge. Two guitars, bass, drums and some very melodic songwriting by vocalist Ben Melnick are the headbolts of this gimmickless combo, whose songs before lacked spark — could it be because it was the band's third or so gig? — but this time shined, even if the band could still sharpen its punches some. (Catch them with J.C. Hopkins and The Sarnos Sat/23 at 8 pm at the Sacred Grounds, Hayes and Cole, SF.) As for future Intersection shows, rock's not the main course, but watch for interesting and challenging performances by the likes of Elbows Akimbo, who stage a show there July 11th.

Who's back in town but Jack Waterson. He's the ex-Green on Red bass player who surprised a lot of people by releasing a cool album's worth of his own songs last year on Heyday called Whose Dog? Guitarist Tom Watson of Slovenly is now a member of Jack's band, and they play the Hotel Utah on Fri/22 with Jimmie Talks, and the Paradise Lounge on Sat/23 with Field Trip and The Gunbunnies. Looking back towards T-Rex and the Stones, Jack plays an unhurried, blues-toned guitar rock — a far cry, however, from the dreamy whisperings of the Cowboy Junkies, who seemed a very popular item at their Warfield show last June 14th. Is their success due to their accessible, easy-listening style of country and blues? Is it Margo Timmins's sultry voice? Their songs are often rather pleasant, I must admit, but in their nearly two-hour set, individual gems were too easily lost in what sometimes felt like contemporary mood music. The players they had with them were fantastic, and Margo's voice was beautiful, but the whole deal came off feeling stylized — no thanks to those frayed white curtains that hung about the set and absorbed the atmospheric lighting, making the place feel like Stevie Nicks's bedroom.

But they've a right to their individual expression, as does everybody. Come support that right with a series of musical events in conjunction with the Festival for Free Expression (festival schedules are all over town; pick one up and check it out). This week there's Steel Pole Bathing and others Fri/22 at the I Beam; Diamanda Galas, performing There Are No More Tickets to the Funeral, her latest section to her ongoing "Plague Mass" (a work she says she'll continue writing until the end of the AIDS epidemic), at the Kennel Club on Sat/23 at a pre-Box show at 7:30 pm; Pol Dog Pondering and The Jody Grind at Slim's Mon/25; and House of Wheels Tues/26 at the DNA Lounge. Listen to music, write letters and give it all some thought. More coming next week.

And finally: this column is dedicated to Iris, who's leaving the Guardian after five-plus years of keeping things together around here. Good luck on your adventure; we're gonna miss you, but I know you're gonna have a right fine time. ■ bandleader Hugh Masekela perform on the shores of Humboldt's Benbow Lake. Masekela, one of South Africa's most prominent musicians, has made worldwide performances on Paul Simon's Graceland tour and with his own group, Kalahari. Smith, responsible for late-60s hits "Walk on the Wild Side" (not the Lou Reed scooter anthem) and "Hoochie Coochie Man" plays swinging, blues-drenched jazz, and sings with a gruff vocal style. Local band Equinox rounds out the evening, which also includes a gourmet meal by French chef Eric Villard. 7:30 pm, Benbow Lake State Recreation Area, two miles south of Garberville on Hwy. 101, southern Humboldt County. $20-$15. 923-3368.

MEAT BEAT MANIFESTO This industrial, hip-hop, art band actually sounds suspiciously Vegas-y from their press release. "Spiky reptilian latex costumes," "cool sax lines" and a founding member who "studied dance for five years at the Ballet Rambert in England" don't exactly add up to a garage act, do they. Still, these British "Butthole Surfers of hip-hop," who incorporate samples of such luminaries as Charles Manson and Kool and the Gang, must be fun to watch. Locals Sharkbait'll be there too. 10 pm, I Beam, 1748 Haight, SF. $9-$8. 668-6023.

DON PULLEN TRIO This hyperkinetic pianist's work with fellow Mingus alum George Adams made for some of the most driving, straight-ahead music heard in decades. He'll be appearing in trio format this weekend at Yoshi's, as well as discussing and demonstrating his craft in a jazz piano clinic. Pullen's Monk-tinged playing is always soulful, direct and, again, almost as exciting to watch as it is to listen to. Clinic: Sat/23, 1-4 pm. $35; performances: Fri/22-Sat/23, 9 and 11 pm, Yoshi's, 6030 Claremont, Oakl. $14. 652-9200.

RAMBLIN' JACK ELLIOT Ramblin' Jack is a troubador and storyteller who's considered by many to be one of our last true links to the American traditions of folk music. His songs all come from travelling adventures, tales about friends and America's past. Forget that Bruce Springsteen, Bob Dylan, Mick Jagger and a host of other musical icons have named Ramblin' Jack as a major inspiration to their work. All you need remember is that Slim Pickens once said of him, "Jack would never die, they'd merely pour concrete over him," and you'll know enough to go catch his act tonight. 8:15 pm, Noe Valley Ministry, 1021 Sanchez, SF. $9-$8. 647-2272.

EROS Artlick's gathered multimedia works expressing the "pleasure, fun and beauty" of erotic art just in time for the weekend Gay Pride madness. Tonight's opening might be a nice warm-up for Lesbian and Gay Freedom Day parade-goers. Opens tonight at 8 pm, runs Wed.-Sat., noon-8 pm, through July 15th. Artlick, 4147 19th St., SF. 621-5131.

ENVIRONMENTAL FAIR More environmentally conscious good times are in the offing at Gallery Route One's fair, entitled "What Have We Got To Lose?" This event offers shows by performance groups like Planet Drum — who use costumes made of recycled garbage — and music by Terry Haggerty and other local acts. Local environmental organizations, along with preschool and school age children, exhibit environmental artwork, and everyone is encouraged to "make an outdoor sculpture or statement about their feelings toward the environment," and show it off at the fair. Dance Palace, Pt. Reyes Station. $10 donation. 663-1347.

FILMS ON THE HOMELESS These compassionate films should provide a much-needed look at the "forgotten people" of America. Lionel Rogosin's 1956 film On the Bowery depicts life as seen through the gin-and-whisky-soaked gaze of Bowery residents. Chuck Hudina's 1978 film Howie offers a more personal portrait of a Bowery-ite, as its director documents his two-year relationship with an alcoholic ex-sailor who reveals a battered but resolute sense of dignity. The SF Cinematheque's program also includes a 1937 newsreel entitled Street of Forgotten Men. 8 pm, SF Art Institute, 800 Chestnut, SF. $5-$3. 558-8129.

CAROLE MASO AND KAREN LAWRENCE The two authors, both of whom have been praised for their "lyrical and lush prose," read from their second novels, The Art Lover and Springs of Living Water. The New York Times called Masos's Ghost Dance "exquisitely written and ambitious," while Lawrence's Helen Alone won the W.H. Smith Award for Best Canadian First Novel. 7:30 pm, Black Oak Books, 1491 Shattuck, Berk. 486-0698.

FILMS ON SEX AND DEATH Cinematheque continues its "Another View" series with screenings of two new works that address "the complicated relationship between sex and death." Luther Price's Sodom combines hardcore gay pornography with Gregorian chants for a chilling, AIDS-era vision of the fall of Sodom. Keith Sandborn's and Peggy Ahwesh's The Deadman depicts a recently widowed woman's search for identity through a bizarre assortment of sexual partners. 5 pm, SF Art Institute, 800 Chestnut, SF. Free. 558-8129.

TROPICAL DANCE CELEBRATION In celebration of winning the first-place prize in Carnaval San Francisco's Grand Parade, the dance group Mas Makers are hosting a dance party, complete with Caribbean cuisine. Live calypso and soca music by Tropical Vibrations should get the place moving, and there'll even be an "Amateur Calypso Singing Competition" for any would-be

Harry Belafontes. 8 pm-1 am, Caribee Dance Center, 1408 Webster, Oakl. 773-8853.

THE HEARTS TERRAIN See Sat/23.

DON PULLEN See Sat/23.

POI DOG PONDERING The Hawaiian, Texan, Louisianan, accordion and xylophonian "global pop" outfit is back in town, bringing their Poi Dog potpourri of musical styles to Slim's for a one-night stand. "Woody Guthrie shakes hands with Sunny Ade" as this band blends just about every influence under the sun, and seems to have a lot of fun doing it. The show's in support of the two-week Festival for Free Expression. 9 pm, Slim's, 333 11th St., SF. $10. 621-3330.

STRIPTASE WORKSHOP Romantasy, the boutique for all your sensual and romantic needs, presents an opportunity for women to learn the art of the striptease dance. Mirage, a regular performer at the Mitchell Brothers Theater, offers a "hands-on" class in which students learn dance steps and moves, as well as "how to create a romantic environment for the dance." Dress is casual. 7:30-9:30 pm, Romantasy, 199 Moulton, SF. $25. 673-3137.

"THE STRUGGLE FOR DEMOCRACY" Channel 9 presents this East Bloc update in which journalist Patrick Watson travels to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe to examine and assess the "phenomenal changes going on there." Watson conducts man-on-the-street interviews of citizens, and speaks with government officials from Moscow to Bucharest to Gdansk. 9 pm, KQED-TV, Channel 9.

FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION COALITION BENEFIT As part of the Festival for Freedom of Expression, this performance art showcase features the Joe Goode Performance Group, John O'Keefe and Bob Ernst, Contraband, Ellen Sebastian and at least six other groups, all in a benefit for the SF Bay Area Coalition for Freedom of Expression. The popular feminist comic Marga Gomez emcees. 8:30 pm, Theatre Artaud, 450 Florida, SF. $20-$10. 621-7797.

PTL VET TELLS ALL Austin Miles, a former fundraiser for Jim Bakker's ill-fated PTL Club, speaks about life with Jim and Tammy Faye, revealing how the TV empire took advantage of "the elderly, the poor and the genuinely pious." Miles himself, who's now a circus ringmaster, definitely sounds worth checking out. 7:30 pm, El Cerrito Public Library, 6510 Stockton, El Cerrito. 528-7884.

"WITHOUT YOU I'M NOTHING" Outrageous comedienne and Madonna cronie Sandra Bernhard appears at a benefit premiere of her above-titled new film. Afterwards, Ms. Bernhard invites everyone to come whoop it up — again for a good cause — at a dance-party celebration of the film's release. Proceeds from the event go to the SF AIDS Foundation's Food Bank and the American Foundation for AIDS Research. Screening: 7 and 9 pm, Lumiere Theatre, California and Polk, SF. Party: 1015 Folsom/Collosus, Sixth St. and Folsom, SF. $10 for screening and party; $25 for preferred seating and party. Tickets available at City Lights, A Different Light and Modern Times bookstores. 553-8003.

INSPIRAL CARPETS "Bell bottoms and hot pink flowered shirts" are said to be in order for this British band's first gig in the Bay Area. Though the dress code is certainly decade-specific, the Carpets claim to blend influences ranging from the '50s to the '80s in their "throw-enough-shit-at-the-wall-and-some-of-it-will-stick" approach to songwriting. 10 pm, I Beam, 1748 Haight, SF. Free. 668-6023.

NEW FILMS FROM CHILE These films, three of a series collectively titled "Internal Exile," represent some of the more progressive artists to have recently emerged from the Chilean underground. Tatiana Gaviola, the first Chilean woman to make a film inside Chile, daringly presents the period of "Popular Unity" in a positive light in her film, Angels. Rodrigo Ortuzar's surrealist Yesterday's Dream explores voyeurism and the search for the past. Juan Carlos Bustamante's Lizard Tales examines, in three separate stories, how Chile's recent history affects individuals. Angels and Yesterday's Dream at 7:30 pm, Lizard Tales at 9 pm. Pacific Film Archive, 2625 Durant, Berk. $4.50-$5.25. 642-1412.

work, 70 12th St., SF. $5-$3. 621-1001.

3-D CUPS "The screen comes alive" at the York as 3-D softporn classics The Stewardesses and The Surfer Girls appear in all their Stereovision splendor. Thrill as a crew of stewardesses "partake in their after hours affairs," and a group of beautiful surfettes go in search of the legendary sexual witchdoctor, "Kahuna." 7:30 and 9 pm, York Theatre, 2789 24th St., SF. $5. 282-0316.

THEO ANGELOPOULOS FILMS These moody and "beautifully textured" works by the Greek director sound mesmerizing. Voyage to Cythera offers an updated Odyssey, as a partisan from the Greek Civil War returns after years of exile in the Soviet Union to upset the lives of his son and long-deserted wife. The Beekeeper, a Paris, Texas-like road movie, follows a drifter, played by Marcello Mastroianni, as he escapes from a dark past into an obsession with his job as a beekeeper. Beekeeper at 7 pm, Voyage at 9:15 pm, Pacific Film Archive, 2625 Durant, Berk. $4.50-$5.25. 642-1412.

CRITIC'S CHOICE/Movies

Julie Murray and Erika Suderburg

Heavy fragmentation packs a powerful punch in Julie Murray's set of short experimental films — Fuck Face, Tracheotomy Pussy, Expulsion and A Legend of Parts — playing at the Cinematheque's Sat/23 Eye Gallery screening. Her cast of characters includes figures on three-dimensional post cards, animals from wildlife documentaries, porn queens and a host of unlikely others. Against humorously mal-fitting soundtracks (like tourism jargon against an Irish skyline exploding with bullets), the dense, highly edited sequence of frames creates "between-the-frames" dialogues about violence, dishonest politics, porn and power. With Erika Suderburg's video Displayed Termination: The Interval Between Deaths, a half-hour compilation of war stories and boldly anti-humane war footage, the program is a strong attack on institutionalized violence.

Answering A Relationship Ad Is Now A Lot Easier.

Introducing 1-900-844-5555

person to
personals

The Bay Guardian
Relationship Reply Line

Introducing yourself to someone new isn't the easiest thing in the world to do. But since 1966, Bay Guardian Classified has helped thousands of people do just that. And now the Bay Area's best Relationship Ads are even better.

Because now you have a fast, easy way to respond to the Relationships advertisers in the Bay Guardian ... by phone. It's called Person-to-Personals, and it's the state of the art in personal messaging systems. When you call, you can learn more about the advertiser than what's in the paper by simply listening to their outgoing Person-to-Personals message. Not all advertisers record a message right away, but you can still respond by phone.

Think of it — no time consuming letter-writing (unless you want to, of course). No waiting by the mailbox day after day for the response to your response. Person-to-Personals is a sophisticated touch-tone service that takes you closer to your heart's desire, step by step. You can introduce yourself to the person whose ad caught your eye (or ear) in the privacy of your own phone.

Your voice will be clearly recorded with the highest technical standards available. You can hear your own message played back to you before you save it. Or change it. Or delete it ... and try again. The system allows you to browse through any or all of our advertisers' outgoing messages. And you can leave as many messages as you want to as many advertisers as you wish.

If you think of yourself as a low-tech person in a high-tech world, don't worry. Person-to-Personals is designed to be as user-friendly as possible, providing clear, simple instructions each time you call. The fee for calling the Person-to-Personals number is only 99¢ per minute, automatically added to your monthly phone bill. That's a small price to pay for a priceless opportunity.

At least Murphy's momentarily back to minimum profanity and the appealing character that won him instant stardom in the original. San Francisco: Empire (85 West Portal at Vicente. 661-2539); daily at 12:45, 3:10, 5:35, 8 and 10:20. Royal (1529 Polk at California. 474-0353); daily at 1:30, 3:40, 5:40, 8 and 10:20. East Bay: Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 562-9990); daily at noon, 12:45, 2:10, 3:10, 4:40, 5:35, 7:10, 8, 9:30 and 10:20. Piedmont (4186 Piedmont at 41st St., Oakl. 654-2727); call for times. California (Kittredge at Shattuck, Berk. 848-0620); daily at 7:20 and 9:30 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 12:45, 2:55 and 5:05.

■ Back to the Future 3 It's more like Back To The Past, as time machine inventor Christopher Lloyd settles in the very Wild West of 1885 and falls for Mary Steenburgen in this action-packed finale that B.T.T.F. fans will love, and in which all Michael J. Fox does is merely to change history. San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore. 931-9800); call for times. Empire (85 West Portal at Vicente. 661-2539); daily at noon, 2:35, 5:10, 7:50 and 10:30. East Bay: Grand Lake (3200 Grand, Oakl. 452-3556); daily at 1, 3:20, 5:40, 8, 10:20. California (Kittredge at Shattuck, Berk. 848-0620); daily at 7, 7:45, 9:45 and 10:15 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 12:15, 1:30, 2:45, 4:15 and 5:15.

■ The Big Bang James Toback's movie has no script, no story and no actors, just 19 highly diverse characters including an astronomer, a nun and a gangster, answering questions about the cosmos, God, orgasm, identity, love, madness, family, crime and death in ways that are thoughtful, funny and revealing, and make this a very sharp snap, crackle and pop if not a big bang. San Francisco: Lumiere (1572 California at Polk, 885-3200): daily at 1:30, 3:30, 5:30, 7:30 and 9:30. East Bay: ACT (2128 Center at Shattuck, Berk. 548-7200): call for times.

"EXTRA! TRACY IS TOPS."

WARREN BEATTY creates the best comic strip movie yet.

A gangland drama of wit, grace and unique visual style.

■ The Big Picture Spot-on spoof of Hollywood's attitude toward top-award-winning film school student Kevin Bacon, in which Martin Short's marvelous as a riotously effete agent, comes and fantasizes about and Kevin really brings home the bacon. San Francisco: Opera Plaza (Van Ness and Golden Gate, 771-0102): call for times.

■ Bird on a Wire The movie's as meaningless as the title as the minimal plot has state witness Mel Gibson running into long-time-no-see-girlfriend Goldie Hawn as the baddies are closing in, and the rest's a mix of just about every sort of violence imaginable. San Francisco: Northpoint (Powell at Bay, 989-6060): daily at 7:15 and 9:45 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 2:20 and 4:45. Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore, 931-9800): call for times. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107): daily at 12:30, 2:30, 5, 7:30, 10, UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 843-1487): call for times. Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 562-9990): daily at 12:20, 2:40, 4:55, 7:15 and 9:35.

■ Cadillac Man Give Cadillac-quality comedian Robin Williams a script and you have an Edsel of a movie, though he does try hard as he finds himself about to lose his job as a car salesman at the crucial financial time, until nutty Tim Robbins inadvertently saves him, if not the movie. San Francisco: Galaxy (1285 Sutter at Van Ness, 474-8700): call for times. Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 752-5100): daily at 1, 3:15, 5:30, 7:45 and 10. East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 844-3370): call for times.

■ Cinema Paradiso Loving, set-in-a-Sicilian-village look at people who love movies, specifically Impish little Salvatore Cascio, who learns to differentiate between reel and real life from compassionate projectionist Philippe Noiret in a movie that will long linger in your mind. San Francisco: Bridge (3010 Geary at Blake, 751-3212): call for times. East Bay: UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 843-1487): daily at 12:30, 3, 5:30, 7:50 and 10:10. Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107): daily at 12:30, 3, 5:30, 8 and 10:20.

■ The Cook, The Thief, His Wife and Her Lover Unrated Grand Guignol of a movie in which we're spared no side of Thief Michael Gambon's ghoulish nature as he avenges himself on Wife Helen Mirren for her infidelity with bookish Diner Alan Howard that's food for thought, but the kind that'll make you throw up. San Francisco: Lumiere (1572 California at Polk, 885-3200): call for times. East Bay: Albany (1115 Solano, Albany, 524-5556): call for times.

■ Daddy's Dyle...Who's Got the Whif? A first-class ensemble cast of second-ranked but not second-rate actors is the reason to see this "dramedy" about a Texas family wrangling around Daddy's deathbed. The script from Del Shores' play is nothing special, but the performances are; it's a welcome respite from lesser films that cost ten times as much to make. (Steve Warren) San Francisco: Presidio (Chestnut near Scott, 922-1318): daily at 5, 7 and 9 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1 and 3. East Bay: California (Kittredge at Shattuck, Berk. 848-0620): call for times.

■ Days of Thunder East Bay: Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 562-9990): call for times. Piedmont (4186 Piedmont at 41st St., Oakl. 654-2727): call for times. Berkeley (2425 Shattuck at Haste, Berk. 848-4300): call for times.

■ Dick Tracy Warren Beatty has miscast himself in the lead and overworked Al Pacino as an over-the-top gangster, but Madonna is surprisingly good as a seductress and the sparingly-used Dustin Hoffman terrifically funny. There's too much of everything else as this modest entertainment tries to live up to its hype. (Steve Warren) San Francisco: Regency I (1320 Van Ness at Sutter, 885-6773): daily at noon, 2:30, 5, 7:45 and 10:30. East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 844-3370): call for times. Grand Lake (3200 Grand, Oakl. 452-3556): daily at 1:30, 4:15, 7 and 9:40.

■ Driving Miss Daisy Superbly scripted and acted 25-year-spanning movie in which acerbic, wealthy, 72-year-old southern Jewish Jessica Tandy learns to like and love perennially polite, black, 60-ish chauffeur Morgan Freeman, and makes this mostly a pure joyride. San Francisco: Galaxy (1285 Sutter at Van Ness, 474-8700): call for times. Balboa (38th Ave. and Balboa, 221-8184): daily at 1:10, 4:50 and 3:30. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107): daily at 1:30, 3:45, 5:45, 8 and 10.

■ Enemies: A Love Story If Paul Mazursky's farce from the Isaac Bashevis Singer novel weren't so serious it might be called Wed Three Wives. That's the situation Holocaust survivor Ron Silver finds himself in in New York in 1949, when varying commitments to Anjelica Huston, Lena Olin and Margaret Sophie Stein make him a trigamist. The interesting moral dilemma and a strong sense of time and place make this a winner. (Steve Warren) San Francisco: Opera Plaza (Van Ness and Golden Gate, 771-0102): daily at 7:15 and 9:30 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 12:30, 2:45 and 5. East Bay: UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 843-1487): daily at 12:30, 2:50, 5:10, 7:40 and 10:10.

■ Flashback East Bay: Lake Merritt Theater (1834 Park at E. 18th Ave., Oakl. 835-3535): daily at 7 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 2:25.

■ Gods Must Be Crazy II East Bay: Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 562-9990): call for times.

■ Gremlins 2: The New Batch The best of the summer sequels so far is heavier on light humor (especially in-jokes for movie buffs) and lighter on heavy sentiment than the original, as Gizmo's new offspring invade the domain of developer/cable king John Glover. (Steve Warren) San Francisco: Coronet (3575 Geary at Arguello, 752-4400): daily at 12:30, 3, 5:20, 7:55 and 10:30. Stonestown (19th Ave. and Winston, 221-8182): daily at 12:45, 3:10, 5:30, 8 and 10:15. East Bay: Grand Lake (3200 Grand, Oakl. 452-3556): daily at 1, 3:30, 6, 8:25 and 10:40. Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 844-3370): call for times.

■ Guardian East Bay: Lake Merritt Theater (1834 Park at E. 18th Ave., Oakl. 835-3535): daily at 8 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 4:20.

■ Handmaid's Tale San Francisco: Balboa (38th Ave. and Balboa, 221-8184): daily at 1:20, 5 and 8:40.

■ Happy Together From the moment likable serious-writer-to-be college freshman Patrick Dempsey's assigned roommate Helen Slater because her first name's Alex, the movie's entirely predictable, and Slater's so excruciatingly vivacious, among other things, that when one asks, "Is there anything she can't do?" the obvious answer is, "Yes, be believable." San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore, 931-9800): call for times.

■ Heart Condition San Francisco: Balboa (38th Ave. and Balboa, 221-8184): daily at 3, 6:40 and 10:10.

■ Henry V Kenneth Branagh's version's so different from Laurence Olivier's that comparisons are difficult, but it's brilliantly acted by a superb British cast, its darkness lightened by a hilarious scene between two women and should be judged entirely on its own merits. San Francisco: Opera Plaza (Van Ness and Golden Gate, 771-0102): call for times.

times. East Bay: Albany (1115 Solano, Albany, 524-5556): call for times.

■ Hunt for Red October The impressive-looking movie's first half's got more confusing ingredients than a double submarine sandwich, but once the Lithuanian-submarine-captain-Sean-Connery-headed-for-the-U.S.-to-defect-or-destroy? plot's established, the second half's action's sensational and would even qualify as white-knuckling. San Francisco: Four Star (2200 Clement at 23rd Ave. 752-2650): call for times. East Bay: Lake Merritt Theater (1834 Park at E. 18th Ave., Oakl. 835-3535): daily at 9:05 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 4:30.

■ Impulse Theresa Russell is terrific as a disturbed policewoman implicated in a murder. She's the best thing about Sandra Locke's okay thriller that would have been a lot better if the plot hadn't gone out of bounds in the second half. (Steve Warren) San Francisco: Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 752-5100): daily at 7 and 9:15.

■ In The Spirit San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore, 931-9800): call for times.

■ Last Exit to Brooklyn Very Teutonic-flavored view of a 1952 working-class Brooklyn waterfront neighborhood in which prostitute Jennifer Jason Leigh and sexually unsure Stephen Lang suffer appalling fates in the nightmarish version of the American Dream. San Francisco: Gateway (Jackson at Battery, 421-3353): daily at noon, 2:20, 4:40, 7 and 9:25.

■ Lisa San Francisco: Balboa (38th Ave. and Balboa, 221-8184): daily at 3:15, 7 and 10:30.

■ Longtime Companion Very well scripted and acted story of the affect of AIDS on a small group of friends and acquaintances from its announcement in a 1981 N.Y. Times article to the present day that expertly weaves together emotion and information in an all-encompassing, moving, learning experience. San Francisco: Cinema 21 (2141 Chestnut at Steiner, 921-6720): call for times. East Bay: Fine Arts (Shattuck at Haste, Berk. 848-2038): daily at 7:30 and 9:40 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1, 3:10 and 5:20. Piedmont (4186 Piedmont at 41st St., Oakl. 654-2727): call for times.

■ Mama, There's a Man in Your Bed Immensely likable black chairwoman Firmine Richard knows much more about her wealthy, self-absorbed boss Daniel Auteuil's business than he does, so when she saves him from ruin and he marries her, he definitely gets the best of the deal in this entertainingly off-beat movie. San Francisco: Vogue (Sacramento and Presidio, 221-8183): daily at 1:15, 3:30, 5:45, 8 and 10:15. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107): daily at 12:30, 2:50, 5:10, 7:30 and 9:45.

■ Miami Blues Alec Baldwin's fresh out of jail, Jennifer Jason Leigh's a soft-hearted hooker, but both seek respectability in this fast-moving, very-well-acted-and-written movie that will keep you guessing almost all the time. San Francisco: Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 752-5100): daily at 1:30, 5:30, 7:30 and 9:30.

■ Monsieur Hire Darkly disturbing, fascinating film in which funeral-looking voyeur Michel Blanc watches neighbor Sandrine Bonnaire from his darkened apartment, and what happens when she realizes what's going on, that has an added fillip of murder, and in which Blanc's never less than mesmerizing. San Francisco: Clay (2281 Fillmore at Clay, 346-1123): daily at 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. East Bay: ACT (2128 Center at Shattuck, Berk. 548-7200): daily at 7:15 and 9:15 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 1:15, 3:15 and 5:15.

■ Mountains of the Moon Sometimes the savage natives, animals and impressive scenery are more interesting than the characters given the actors, as explorer Patrick Bergin and Iain Glen search for the source of the Nile in 1854 East Africa in a film that sets up fascinating scenes but never quite follows through with them. San Francisco: Opera Plaza (Van Ness and Golden Gate, 771-0102): daily at 7 and 9:20 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 2 and 4:30.

■ My Left Foot Extraordinary in every way, this is the true life story of Irish Catholic Christy Brown, born with cerebral palsy that gave him control only over his left foot, who rose above it to become famous as an artist and memoirist, made even more memorable by Daniel Day-Lewis's virtuoso performance. San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore, 931-9800): call for times. East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107): daily at 12:45, 3, 5:15, 7:30 and 9:45.

■ Pretty Woman Corporate mogul Richard Gere wants the services of $100-an-hour hooker Julia Roberts for one week, and how it all works out makes for a highly entertaining come-uppance of look-downers-on among other little gems in which Gere's very good and Roberts a dramatic delight. San Francisco: Alhambra (Polk and Green, 775-2137): daily at 12:30, 2:50, 5:10, 7:30 and 9:50. Stonestown (19th Ave. and Winston, 221-8182): daily at 1:15, 3:20, 5:30, 7:40 and 9:50. East Bay: Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 562-9990): daily at 12:30, 2:55, 5:15, 7:40 and 10:05. Rockridge Showcase West (293 Whitmore, near 45th St. and Broadway, Oakl. 658-2285): call for times. Berkeley (2425 Shattuck at Haste, Berk. 848-4300): call for times.

■ Robocop II East Bay: South Shore Cinemas (2245 Shoreline, Alameda, 521-4200): call for times. Oaks (1875 Solano, Berk. 526-1836): call for times. Piedmont (4186 Piedmont at 41st St., Oakl. 654-2727): call for times.

■ Tales from the Darkside East Bay: Lake Merritt Theater (1834 Park at E. 18th

CRITIC'S CHOICE/Movies

Diego Rivera: I Paint What I See

They should have played it May 1st-5th. Mary Lance's and Eric Breitbart's straightforward biography shows how Mexican muralist Diego Rivera linked May Day and Cinco de Mayo, ever willing to destroy his work rather than compromise its political content, as when a head of Lenin kept his Rockefeller Center mural from being completed. Called "a communist painter sought after by the world's biggest capitalists," the Pacific Stock Exchange and the 1939 World's Fair brought him to San Francisco, where he married Frida Kahlo the second time. Much of the soundtrack is from Rivera's and Kahlo's writings; the visuals include many old photos, newsreels and stock footage, plus the subjects' art and contemporary footage of Rivera's home town of Guanajuato. This is a fine introduction to Rivera and Kahlo, unlike Paul Leduc's patchwork-puzzle approach in the co-feature, Frida, which presumes complete foreknowledge of their life stories.

— Steve Warren

■ Diego Rivera: I Paint What I See. Fri/22-Wed/27 at 7:30 pm, with matinees Sat. and Sun. at 4 pm; plus Frida at 8:45 pm, with matinees Sat. and Sun. at 1:45 and 5:15 pm. York Theater, 2789 24th St., SF. 282-0316.

Ave., Oakl. 835-3535): daily at 6:10 and 9:50 with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 2:30.

■ Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles There's a lot of violence as the good-guy Ninja turtles try to make turtle soup out of a gang of teenage boys terrorizing New York, and it looks as if the movie's success will depend on how well it fares against its comic book and cartoon competition. San Francisco: Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 752-5100): call for times. East Bay: Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 562-9990): call for times.

■ The Ten Commandments San Francisco: Metro (Union and Webster, 931-1685): daily at 11 am, 3:30 and 8.

■ The Tenants San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore, 931-9800): call for times.

■ Tie Me Up, Tie Me Down Take 23-year-old mental institution patient Antonio Banderas, now declared sane, his search for porn movie queen Victoria Abril to be his bride and her adamant refusal so that he has to tie her up in order to tie her down, and you have a very lively, delightfully acted movie that'll string you along in a way you're bound to find entertaining. San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore, 931-9800): call for times. East Bay: UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 843-1487): call for times. Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107): daily at 1, 3:10, 5:20, 7:30, 9:45.

■ Total Recall Well, that's the last thing you'll wish for where this incredibly violent movie's concerned, as somewhere-in-the-future Arnold Schwarzenegger has Mars nightmares and takes a mind-bending two-week memory of a visit there, and almost loses his mind in the process. Not that you'd notice. San Francisco: Galaxy (1285 Sutter at Van Ness, 474-8700): call for times. Empire (85 West Portal at Vicente, 661-2539): daily at 11:50 am, 2:20, 4:50, 7:30 and 10. East Bay: Rockridge Showcase West (293 Whitmore, near 45th St. and Broadway, Oakl. 658-2285): call for times. Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 562-9990): daily at 11:50 am, 1, 2:20, 3:40, 4:50, 6:30, 7:30, 9 and 10. Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 420-0107): daily at 12:15, 12:45, 2:40, 3:10, 5, 5:30, 7:30, 8, 9:50 and 10:20. UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 843-1487): daily at 12:50, 3:10, 5:30, 8 and 10:30.

CRITIC'S CHOICE/Art

1,000 Faces

Masks have been an integral part of many cultures for thousands of years. When you slip one over your face, something magical happens. In this act of transformation, masks are capable of evoking a wide range of emotional and spiritual states. The kaleidoscope of colors, styles and materials in the selection of masks in "1,000 Faces (A Community Artwork in Progress)" reflects this, as well as the ethnic diversity within Oakland. The brain trusts behind the exhibit however, feel that the very act of mask-making can also effect profound change. In addition to commissioning multi-cultural artists to create masks of Oakland's hometown heroes, they conduct mask-making workshops within the community in order to foster better relations among Oakland's diverse population.

— Harry Roche

CRITIC'S CHOICE/Dance

Dance Connection '90

In case you haven't heard, San Francisco State University has a very dynamic program in non-Western dance that supplements its more traditional training opportunities. In its yearly dance festival, Dance Connection, organizers invited ethnic, modern and ballet companies performing on the same evenings to not only emphasize the variety of existing dance traditions, but also to point out often overlooked existing commonalities. Making its Bay Area premiere at this year's festival is the modern Akiko Ishii Repertory Dance Group from Tokyo. Lulu Washington's Contemporary Dance Theatre, which practically took the roof off Theatre Artaud last November, also performs, as does powerhouse Aubrey Lynch from Alvin Dance Theater and other guest companies.

— Rita Felciano

■ Dance Connection '90. June 21st-23rd and 29th-30th at 8 pm, McKenna Theatre, SFSU, Holloway and 19th Ave., SF. $8. 338-2467.

tive performs this reworking of an ancient Korean fable. Opens Thurs/28. Plays Thurs-Sun. at 8:30 pm. Through July 15. Mission Cultural Center, 2868 Mission, SF. $9; pay-what-you-can Thursdays. 821-1155.

Ongoing

■ Burn This The romance between Anna (Andrea Marcovicci), a sophisticated Manhattan dancer, and Pale (Daniel Reichert), a sewer-mouthed New Jersey primitive, may seem unlikely at first, but Lanford Wilson's impassioned script and ACT's heat-seeking missile of a production make this a scorcher of a show. Intimations of sex, love, death, art and friendship can be found in Wilson's unusually visceral love story, which examines unfulfilled yearnings of many kinds. Beautifully acted and highly recommended — If you can score a ticket. (Misha Berson) Plays Mon.-Sat. at 8 pm with matinees Sat. and Wed. at 2 pm. Through June 24. Stage Door Theater, 420 Mason, SF. $10-$32. 749-2228.

■ The Glass Menagerie Stanley S. Spenger directs this production of Tennessee Williams' play. Plays Thurs.-Sat. at 8 pm. Through June 30. 1834 Euclid, Berk. $7-$5. 843-5617.

■ The Resistible Rise of Arturo Ui Bertolt Brecht's tough-minded Depression fable of gangsters as fascist thugs gets lackluster treatment in a new production staged by Geoff Luck. The amateurish acting misses much more than it hits, and there's no overriding style to bind this long evening together. The much-hyped set by well-known artist John Baldessari doesn't help much. It consists mostly of blown-up photo images from old movies, wheeled around the stage to little effect. (Misha Berson) Plays Tues.-Sat. at 8 pm. Through June 30. Zephyr Theater complex, 25 Van Ness near Market, SF. $20-$22; $10 students and seniors. 861-6895.

■ A Man and a Woman A comedy about the radio station relationship between a gay man and a lesbian woman. Plays Wed.-Sun. at 8 pm, except Sat/23. Through July 1. Theatre Rhinoceros, 2926 16th St., SF. $8-$10. 861-5079.

■ The Three Policemen This black comedy/mystery plays with another of Bret Fetzer's one-acts, What the Plumber Saw, featuring a "poisoned-tongued" marriage. Plays Thurs.-Sat. at 8 pm. Through July 7. Studio Eremos, 401 Alabama, #127, SF. $10. 552-3541.

■ Ain't Misbehavin' A musical revue of Fats Waller's tunes set in an after hours gin joint. Plays Tues.-Fri. at 8 pm, Sat. at 6 and 9 pm, Sun. at 2:30 and 7 pm. Through July 8. Marines Memorial Theatre, Sutter at Mason, SF. $16-$18. 771-8900.

■ Madame Mao's Memories Henry Ong's one-woman show probes the rise and fall of Jiang Qing, Mao Tse Tung's wife. Plays Wed.-Sat. at 8 pm and Sun. at 3 pm. Through July 8. Asian American Theater Center, 403 Arguello (at Clement), SF. $13-$15. 751-2600.

■ Sarafina A musical celebration of South African students' rebellion against apartheid. Call for dates and showtimes. Through July 8. Golden Gate Theatre, Golden Gate and Market, SF. $10-$37.50. 474-3800.

■ Babel Magic Lightning Productions completes their opening season with this "science fable" synthesizing old mythologies with new cosmologies. Plays Fri.-Sat. at 8 pm, Sun. at 2 pm. Through July 15. The Lab, 1805 Divisadero, SF. $13-$15. 526-5329.

■ Curse of the Werewolf A lavish musical production of Ken Hill's story of a man's transformation into a werewolf. Plays Tues.-Fri. at 8 pm, Sat. at 8:30 pm, Sun. at 7:30 pm, with matinees Sat.-Sun. at 2:30 pm. Through July 15. Theatre on the Square, 450 Post, SF. $22-$34. 433-9500.

■ Solo Journeys Two one-person performances featuring Kent Whipple, Doug Beale: Atlanta 1983 and On the Road: San Francisco 1990. Plays Wed.-Sat. at 8 pm, Sun. at 7:30 pm, with selected Sun. matinees. Through July 15. Eureka Theatre, 2730 16th St., SF. $13-$17. 558-9898.

■ Working A play about the lives of working people, adapted from the Studs Terkel book. Plays Thurs.-Sun., call for times. Through July 21. Civic Arts Stage II Theatre, 1535 East, Walnut Creek. $9-$10. 943-5862.

■ Born in the R.S.A. This play examines the destruction apartheid has brought to South Africa. Plays Tues.-Fri. at 8 pm, Sun. at 2 and 7 pm, with selected matinees Thurs. and Sat. Through July 22. Berkeley Repertory Theatre, 2025 Addison, Berk. $18-$24. 845-4700.

■ Eastern Standard Yuppie-bashing with style. Both a light romantic comedy and a concerned examination of skewed ethics among well-heeled, narcissistic young Manhattanites, Richard Greenberg's play contains many stinging barbs and a few genuine insights about the material boys and girls of the '80s. But all this doesn't hit home the way it should: it gets too long; the major plot contrivances are too hard to swallow (especially a patio-side encounter with a homeless bag lady); and the actors do too much fierce emoting in roles that should be played medium-cool. (Misha Berson) Plays Wed.-Sat. at 8:30 pm, Sun. at 2 and 7:30 pm. Through July 22. Cowell Theater, Pier 2, Fort Mason Center, Buchanan at Marina, SF. $11-$21. 441-8001 or 441-8822.

President Gorbachev: Speech at Stanford

vaescence in an ordinary household. Plays Fri.-Sat. at 8:30 pm, with selected Sun. matinees. Through July 28. Masquers Playhouse, 105 Park Place, Point Richmond. SF. 232-4031.

■ Andrea's Got Two Boyfriends Island Players present this play about the daily lives of three developmentally disabled adults who are residents at a self-help facility. Plays Sat. at 5:30 and 8 pm, with special Friday performances June 22, and Aug. 3 at 8 pm. Through Aug. 4. Island Playhouse, 900 Santa Clara, Alameda. $8-$5. 521-8965.

■ House of Yes Wendy MacLeod's very dark send-up of American violence and decadence combines elements of Genet fables, Jacobean comedies and Andy Warhol films. It focuses on the upper class members of a (literally) incestuous McLean, Virginia clan. Mom is a glamorous airhead; her three grown kids are so spoiled and narcissistic they can barely function. (The looniest is convinced she's Jackie Onassis and her brother is JFK.) When a "normal" stranger enters this den of weirdness, all psycho-sexual hell breaks loose. This show is a surprise hit for the Magic, and it's clear why: There's a wicked kinkiness at work here, some deliciously arch repartee and a few real dramatic shocks. But the comic tone wobbles periodically, and in the end you may wonder just how deep MacLeod's satire penetrates. Directed by Andrew Doe. (Misha Berson) Plays Wed.-Sat. at 8:30 pm. Extended through Aug. 5. Magic Theatre, Fort Mason Center, Building D, Marina and Buchanan, SF. $11-$19. 441-8001 or 441-8822.

■ Les Miserables More of a phenomenon than a show, but better than Cats if Broadway blockbusters are your thing. Just beware when you fork over your $50 for an orchestra seat that the songs are in the strained-vocal-chord pop school of Whitney Houston, the history and politics of revolutionary France are sketchy, and the tear-jerking is shameless and utterly synthetic. What works magnificently are the show's visual aspects, most obviously David Hersey's lighting and John Napier's production design. (Misha Berson) Plays Tues.-Sat. at 8 pm, with matinees Wed. and Sat. at 2 pm and Sun. at 3 pm. Extended through Aug. 5. Curran Theatre, 445 Geary, SF. $16-$55. 243-9001 or 474-3800.

■ Bar None A comedy-mystery that starts off like the senior play at Harvey Milk High School turns into a laugh riot when the audience gets into the investigation in the second act. It ain't Art, despite some artful performances, but the long-running hit's a crowd-pleaser. (Steve Warren) Plays Wed.-Fri. at 8 pm, Sat. at 7 and 9:30 pm and

Sun. at 2 pm. Open-ended. Mason Street Theater, 340 Mason, SF. $18-$20. 861-6895.

■ The Execution of Abe Goldstein, a Depraved Homosexual Throwing tomatoes at abusive actors? It sounds so '60s. Director Tad Baker acts as an anti-Semitic, homophobic game-show host while you are the jury, deciding the fate of the "Jew homo" who's been willfully spreading AIDS. David Epstein's performance as Abe is good enough to make you question your views on capital punishment, and Baker is vile enough to convert a like-minded sexist/racist. The other players are weaker, their improvised "testimony" often going on too long. Maybe it's all too much 'fun,' but it achieves its goal of making you think, and could develop a cult. (Steve Warren) Plays Fridays at 9:31 pm. Open-ended. Upstairs at Ye Rose and Thistle, 1624 California St., SF. Sliding scale: call for reservations. 334-4933.

■ Greater Tuna This compassionate satire of small-town Texas life barbecues bigots without robbing them of their humanity. Plays Mon.-Fri. at 8 pm and Sat. at 6 and 9 pm. Open-ended. Cable Car Theatre, 430 Mason, SF. $15-$19. 771-6900.

■ Murder Mystery Weekend This audience participation "Whodunit" by Keith O'Leary and Margo Morrison puts the audience at odds with incognito actors in solving a murder mystery during dinner. Plays Sat. at 7 pm. Open-ended. Charley's Cafe, Fisherman's Wharf, Beach and Jones, SF. $65. (800) 327-3862.

Closing

■ Hamlet II Open Wing Theatre Company presents Sam Brobrick's comedic version of the Shakespearean drama. Plays Fri.-Sat. at 8 pm. Through June 23. The Next Stage, 1668 Bush at Gough, SF. $7-$9. 821-4202.

■ The Triple Crown of Magic and Laughter This magical revue features Charles and The Lady, humorist/juggler Fred Anderson, Mr. Mystic and ventriloquist Ken Karter. Plays Fri.-Sat. at 8:30 and 10:30 pm. Through June 23. Cannery Theatre, 2801 Leavenworth at Beach, SF. $10. 441-5583.

■ Beijing Legends Shem Bitterman's play contains a sweeping overview of China's modern political movements that is informative and thought-provoking, but the characters are slogan-spouting signposts of history rather than compelling embodiments of it. The plot concerns the estrangement between a father and his son, both victims of the idealism and disillusionment that run on parallel tracks from Mao's Long March to the Tiananmen Square massacre. Bill Reichblum directs the large, uneven cast; in the lobby is a wrenching photo exhibit of the Tiananmen uprising organized by Chinese students at U.C. Berkeley. (Misha Berson) Plays Thurs.-Sat. at 8 pm and Sun. at 2 pm. Through June 24. Pacific Jewish Theatre, Spice Box Cultural Center, 820 Heinz, Berk. $15-$19. 849-0550.

■ Dirty Dreams of a Clean-Cut Kid Whatever the results of the five characters' HIV tests, Henry Mach's and Paul Katz's premiering musical is positive in its attitude toward the AIDS epidemic and the changes it's wrought in gay male lifestyles. In the health center waiting room, the five reflect back on their lives in song, Chorus Line style. The absence of dialogue puts too much burden for character delineation on the costumes, but gay men will find much relate to in the nostalgia and ultimately upbeat outlook. (Steve Warren) Plays Wed.-Sun. at 8 pm, with a matinee Sun/24 at 3 pm. Through June 24. Theatre Rhinoceros, 2926 16th St., SF. $8-$15. 861-5079.

Short Runs

■ Devil's Dust Bayview Repertory Theatre Company performs this story of the effects crack has had on a family in the Bayview community. Plays Fri/22-Sat/23 and Fri/29-Sat/30 at 8 pm. Woodrow Wilson High School, 400 Mansell, SF. $10. 821-7520 or 648-1332.

■ East Playwright Steven Berkoff blends Shakespearean-style verse and rough Cockney slang to voice the rage of young and old East Londoners in Thatcher's England. The fine young actors in this low-budget production deliver Berkoff's jumble of slum poetry with great panache, and their juicy physical moves bring it all back home. A violent, profane piece of work, but for the right reasons. (Misha Berson) Plays Thurs/28-Fri/29 at 8 pm, Sat/30 at 10:30 pm. Capp Street Center, 362 Capp (between 18th and 19th Sts., Mission and Van Ness), SF. $10. 526-8622.
